Nation Faces $3,500,000,000 New Taxes; To Hit All

Congress Leaders Agree on Taking Seventh of Nation's Income Next Year

Cost of Defense

SUGGESTED CHANGES in tax levies and how they would affect individuals and corporations, an article by Robert C. Albright. Page 3.

Digging Deep

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The biggest tax program in this Nation's history, diverting almost one-seventh of the Nation's income to the Government, was proposed yesterday by the Administration and agreed on in principle by Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau called for $3,500,000,000 in new taxes, over and above existing levies, a boost whose goal, he said, was to have every individual and every business enterprise pay about one-third more in taxes next year.

The new levies, likely to be sweeping in character and to overlook few sources of revenue, will mean that virtually every man and woman in the country will have to pay out more in taxes to help carry the increasing load of expenditures for national defense and aid to nations fighting the Axis.

$19,000,000,000 Budget

Greatest yet of the sacrifices for defense predicted by President Roosevelt, the new tax program contemplates total Government expenditures in the fiscal year that starts July 1, 1941, of about $19,000,000,000.

Existing taxes are expected to raise only about $9,223,000,000, but the Treasury wants to defray two-thirds of next year's giant outlays by taxation. Consequently, new taxes will be requested to bring in an additional $3,440,000,000, making a total revenue goal of $12,667,000,000.

The remaining third of the unprecedented $19,000,000,000 in Government spending will have to be paid for by borrowing at the rate of about $500,000,000 a month, Morgenthau said.

If the new tax boost were shared evenly by every man, woman and

Auto Output Cut 20% to Aid Defense

An "initial" 20 per cent reduction in automobile production has been agreed to by the American industry, OPM Director Knudsen announced last night. A cut of 1,000,000 cars in the annual output was indicated.

The step was taken "to make available more man power, materials, facilities and management for the defense load now being made ready," he said.

McNutt Asks D. A. R. to Aid Defense Social Welfare Work

Challenge Given To Organization by Security Administrator

A challenge to Daughters of the American Revolution to work at social welfare problems growing out of national defense was sounded by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, in an address to the organization's fifteenth Continental Congress on "The Civilian in National Defense" last night at Constitution Hall.

"I am sorry to say that some women's volunteer groups have shown great zeal in making arrangements for dances for trainees on leave, but refuse to allow their own daughters to attend," he said. "The unattached women who come to these dances are often motivated by certain commercial interests, and the trainees have no other choice of companionship."

However, he said, in most communities women who have planned these projects "have gone to the dances as patrons, and have brought their daughters with them. And they have been delighted to find that their confidence in the character of the trainees has been completely vindicated," McNutt said.

"You can not pride yourselves on patriotism by donating ping-pong tables to a community center when 12-year-old newsboys are getting rich quick by charging $2 a head to 'introduce' local girls, many of them still in high school, to hundreds of out-of-towners working in long-closed but now rejuvenated

House Group Votes Strike Cool-Off Bill

Committee Approves Vinson Plan; Would Freeze Union Status

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A far-reaching bill to prohibit defense strikes without a 25-day "cooling-off" period and to freeze existing open and closed shops in defense plants was approved yesterday by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The measure, sponsored by the committee's chairman, Representative Carl Vinson, of Georgia, is the first major strike-curbing bill to be reported out to the House this session.

The final vote in committee was unanimous, but four Democrats said they cast affirmative ballots "with reservations." Chairman Vinson said he would seek the necessary "green light" from the House Rules Committee on Tuesday, but there were some reports that the bill may be delayed there. However, Vinson predicted that the measure would be passed by the House "Thursday or Friday."

Meanwhile, President William

A Mural for Ickes

Young D. C. Artist to Paint Marian Anderson's Recital

A 25-year-old Washington artist—Mitchell Jamieson—was announced yesterday as the winner of a competition to paint a mural commemorating the celebrated Marian Anderson recital at Lincoln Memorial two years ago.

Selection of Jamieson's design was revealed by Edward Bruce, chief of the section of fine arts, Federal Works Agency. The artist will receive $1,700 for the painting.

To be installed in the new Interior Building, the mural will portray the emotional reaction to Miss Anderson's singing. The recital, heard by a crowd of 75,000, was held on Easter Sunday, 1939, at Lincoln Memorial after the use of Constitution Hall had been denied to the colored artist.

It was Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes who introduced Miss Anderson and it is in his building that Jamieson's interpretation of the event will be installed, on the west wall of the first floor corridor.

Irked by the policy of the D. A. R.-owned Constitution Hall, which bars Negro artists, Bruce organized a committee to finance the Anderson mural. Small contributions were received from all over the country. Expenses of the campaign were borne by the committee.

Altogether, 172 painters participated in the anonymous competition for the $1,700 commission. The jury, which unanimously chose Jamieson's design, was composed of Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery here; Richmond Barthe, New York sculptor, and the painters Gustaf Dalstrom, of

Lend-Lease Move to Help In the Battle Of Atlantic

Four American cargo ships of latest design and fast enough to outrun a submarine have been acquired by the Maritime Commission for immediate transfer to Great Britain under the Lend-Lease Act.

The brand new Robin Doncaster, of the Seas Shipping Co. (Robin line), has already been delivered to the British government at Baltimore, and the three other ships are in process of delivery, the commission announced.

First American cargo vessels to be turned over to Britain under the lend-lease program, the four ships are the 7,440-ton Robin Doncaster, the 6,700-ton Exemplar, of the American Export lines; the 7,773-ton Almeria Lykes, of the Lykes Brothers Steamship Co., and the 7,169-ton Nightingale, of the Grace line.

The commission said the four vessels will be registered provisionally under the British flag and will be manned entirely by British officers and crews.

Capable of 19 Knots

Designed to make 15½ knots but capable of surpassing 19, all of the vessels were built under the Maritime Commission program and are adaptable to conversion into naval auxiliary craft.

Acquisition of the ships was disclosed as the House Merchant Marine Committee opened hearings on legislation asked by the Administration to permit requisitioning of idle foreign vessels in American ports. Purchase of foreign as well as American ships for delivery to Britain is contemplated under the lend-lease program.

Nominally, hearings opened on the Oliver bill authorizing negotiated purchase of foreign vessels, but Chairman Emory S. Land asked that the bill be amended to permit use "of any immobilized tonnage that may be acquired by the United States by means other than voluntary transfer."

230 Vessels Idle

In a letter to the committee, Land said there are immobilized in Western Hemisphere ports some 230 foreign ships aggregating 1,275,000 tons, and of these 85 vessels of 450,000 tons are in United States ports. He pointed out that "some 70 vessels (Danish, Italian and German) in ports of the United States and its possessions, have been taken into protective custody."

The Merchant Marine Committee, which will resume in executive session today, is expected to substitute for the Oliver bill provisions of the Administration measure introduced by Chairman Bland, authorizing Government requisitioning and payment for the idle foreign tonnage.

The four ships transferred to Britain are among the newest and fastest of their type in the world, and can travel ahead of convoy speed to elude a submarine. What aid routes they will take was not disclosed.

Newest was the Robin Doncaster launched December 7 at Sparrows

Capitulation Of the Serbs Is Unconditional, Berlin Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), April 18.—Germany announced early today the unconditional capitulation of the remaining fighting units of the Yugoslav army and declared fighting had stopped on all Yugoslav fronts.

The capitulation is effective at noon Friday (5 a. m. E. S. T.), it was stated in a D. N. B., official German news agency, dispatch. Weapons then will be formally surrendered, it was said.

Negotiations for the Yugoslavs to lay down their arms were made exclusively with Serb military authorities. The Germans have said in effect that no Yugoslav government existed, so the capitulation of the army also was regarded as the end of the little world war-born kingdom.

With the exception of Croatia, which has declared its independence, Yugoslavia is regarded as without a functioning government of its own and the German army is deemed the sole authority in the land.

Campaign of 12 Days

There is no immediate reliable indication of what its fate will be.

A 12-day military campaign brought Yugoslavia to the unconditional surrender announced shortly after midnight today.

Just 24 hours ago the German command had announced the surrender of the Yugoslav second army at Sarajevo. Capitulation of the remainder of the forces was said to have occurred at 9 p. m. Thursday night (2 p. m. E. S. T.).

The announced Yugoslav capitulation would release virtually the whole of those German divisions still cleaning up in that broken kingdom for the assault on the British-Greek forces in Greece.

A German radio broadcast said "the endurance and fighting spirit" of the German forces thwarted the Yugoslav attempt to gain a respite by retreat into the wild mountain country of Hercegovina. They were closely pursued, outflanked and halted by blocking of roads and passes in the Sarajevo sector, the radio said.

Meet Stiff Opposition

Meanwhile, in Greece Adolf Hitler's troops are meeting tougher opposition than they had to overcome in Yugoslavia, German sources admitted tonight, and reported that heavy fighting still was going on with the British in the Mount Olympus region.

The high command announced, however, the capture of Servia, 16 miles northwest of Olympus and 70 miles south of the Yugoslav line, in a stroke aimed at the British rear, and said many prisoners were being taken in the advance.

Foreign office observers coupled this offensive with Wednesday night's air raid on London, which the press called "the biggest air raid of all times," and said it showed the Reich was able to carry on war on a multiple front.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary, declared this

Home-Rule Hearing

Congress Has Power to Alter D.C. Government, Says Sumners

Without changing the Federal Constitution, Congress has power to give the District of Columbia "any kind of a government that conforms with the pattern of American democracy," Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday declared before a Senate hearing on his own resolution to enfranchise residents of the National Capital.

Sumners, highly regarded on both sides of the Capitol as a student of Constitutional law, told a Senate judiciary subcommittee conducting the hearing that, in his opinion, Congress has the necessary authority to set up a municipal legislature for the District.

He said he believed Congress, if it desired, could provide the District with government similar to that of the Territory of Alaska, including the right of citizens to send a delegate to the National Legislature. Such a delegate, of course, could not be accorded the right to vote in Congress, he said.

Sumners' authorship of the resolution was acknowledged during the hearing by the measure's Senate sponsor, Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas. Nevertheless, the House member recommended that the subcommittee strike from the bill the clause empowering Congress to delegate to the District "all or any" of the power it now holds over the city.

Sumners was asked how the provision happened to get into the bill.

Chairman McCarran, of the subcommittee, and Senators Austin and Norris joined in the laughter as Sumners replied:

"I guess it got in there one night."

A. P. Man Describes 'Massacre' in Serb Capital by Bombers

Somewhere in Montenegro with the Remnants of the Yugoslav Army, April 16 (Delayed via Athens) (AP).—For nine days I have ridden over most of Yugoslavia watching a gallant army try unsuccessfully with rifles and oxen-drawn artillery to fight off the ponderous mechanized force of Adolf Hitler's panzer division and withstand mass air attacks.

I have seen men, women and children lying by the hundreds in the debris of their homes after mass German air attacks on defenseless cities.

At least 10,000 died in Belgrade alone.

In one square I counted more than 200 bodies after the first raid on the capital.

These civilians were ordered by the government not to clog the roads by wild flight, but to die on their

There were two brief air-raid alarms, but no bombs fell.

Nazi raiders earlier had sped across the English Channel to assault a south coast town.

One German bomber crashed and exploded in a rural area and presumably the crew was killed.

Bombs fell in many open areas near the coast, indicating that German airmen at times had to jettison their loads in the face of heavy ground fire.

Athens (Friday), April 18.—Greek soldiers engaged in the biggest battle of the Balkan war have been forced to retreat as a result of the "increased power of German troops" and the "situation is developing unfavorably," an authoritative spokesman declared early today.

"The uneasiness and regret regarding the military situation is justified," this spokesman asserted.

"The struggle against two empires which was imposed on us by Germany could not last indefinitely."

German troops have appeared on the old Albanian front where the Greeks held back the Italian forces during the winter.

[Germany last night announced the capitulation of the remnants of Yugoslav's army. Thus thousands of Nazi soldiers were released for action against the Greeks.]

Earlier, it had been announced the Allies were fighting a desperate battle—a battle which Greek authorities themselves said would be "decisive"—to hold their center against a German thrust that already had reached the vicinity of the vital railhead of Kalabaka, 90 miles within Greece.

This was the most furious and most fateful of three German attacks upon the Allied line—left, right and center—by steel columns supported by screaming squadrons of dive-bombers.

[An Athens radio report heard in London said that the British right wing north of Katerina had forced the Germans back with heavy losses in fierce fighting.]

The most violent fighting was going on in the Kozane Plateau area, where, the government spokesman said, the Germans were "thrusting south" after crossing the Aliakmon River.

German troops have appeared on the old Albanian frontier and have taken Kafetkarik Ridge in heavy fighting, the Greek press ministry announced.

'Little Green House' to Join Shades of Those It Sheltered

This is the obituary of the "Little Green House on K Street."

In a few days, the narrow little house at 1625 K Street Northwest, whose four close-set windows looked out on a stunted magnolia bush, will go the way of the men who lifted it briefly into history. They are gone, now, all of them; President and lobbyist, politician and poker player have died, one by one, in the years since they made the Little Green House their rendezvous for relaxation and, so it was reported, more sinister things.

Yesterday application was made at the District Building for permission to tear down the green stone house and a small apartment house to the east to make way for a new $500,000 office building. The new structure is to be erected by Commonwealth Properties, Inc.

It will be of concrete, brick and limestone and will contain 1,260,000 cubic feet of space, its width ranging from 48 to 75 feet on a depth of 147 feet. Alvin Aubinoe is listed as the builder and Harvey Warwick as the architect.

In the last ten years, the Little Green House has led a prosaic existence, hardly noticed by a new generation of Washingtonians to whom it existed as no more than a name, more mythical than real. For a few years after it flashed into the news, it stood vacant. It served eventually as a home for several fraternities, and then, in 1931, was remodelled as a business office with apartments on the two upper floors.

Nazis Advance, Reckless of Cost

By Richard D. McMillan.
Copyright by United Press

On the Allied Front, in Greece, April 16 (10 p. m.) (Delayed).—Germany's crack blitzkrieg troops are being mowed down in a mass slaughter before the British-Greek lines which they are attempting to smash in great sledge-hammer blows.

The battle is raging along the curving Allied front on a scale equalizing in fury anything ever seen in last year's German blitzkrieg on the Western Front.

Into the gigantic struggle the German high command has thrown at least three "panzer" divisions as well as picked Austrian Alpine Mountain troops and brigades of youthful Hitler storm troopers known as "blitzmen."

The Germans are being thrown into the battle without any apparent regard for the staggering losses inflicted upon them by the British and Greek armies.

It is the same German strategy of slashing, knifing attacks which I observed on the Western Front in the Battle of France.

Battle-hardened British, Australian and New Zealand troops, sun-leathered veterans of the shattering of the Italian army in North Africa, are leaping into the struggle against the Germans with whooping enthusiasm.

They have inflicted tremendous casualties upon the Germans, holding all mountain passes protecting their section of the Allied line, according to my latest information.

A British major describing to me the furious German assaults on the Allied line said:

"The enemy infantry came on in waves, using machine guns.

"They were four abreast and many lines deep. We mowed them down, but they advanced in such masses that our troops found it humanly impossible to fire quickly enough.

"Then came the tanks, to meet our tanks, which outfought them but were inferior in numbers."

While the British and German tanks battled in the mountain passes, German planes came over in swarms and ceaselessly bombed and machine-gunned.

The German planes used a new criss-cross scissors pattern.

The German Alpine troops meanwhile scaled agilely up the mountain sides in an effort to reach the British.

"We have been fighting for six days, holding pass after pass to insure the withdrawal southwards from Jugoslavia," a British tank officer told me.

He said he believed his regiment had suffered losses but he was so weary and battle-worn that he was unable to give a clear account of how the task of covering the gap on the left flank of the British forces was carried out.

This gap was broken open when German armored forces swept down through Monastir Gap at the Greek-Yugoslav frontier.

Hard-fighting "Aussies" of the British imperial infantry met the surging attack of German tanks near Monastir Gap, blowing Nazi tanks into the air with mine fields as they charged across onto Greek territory in a blinding snowstorm.

Behind the tanks came fresh-faced young German "sturmtruppen," Adolf Hitler's pride, and the Australians drew back slowly under a cover of murderous fire and a rear guard of tanks.

An officer of the British Hussars, who battled valiantly at the mountain passes, said:

"We held the passes until our forces had reached the present line which is resisting terrific onslaughts as the Germans charge on, seeming to take no account of human life."

This same officer said that the British, in their first hand-to-hand encounter with the Germans on the European continent since Dunkerque, were up against "the elite of the entire German army."

"The Germans seem to have unlimited manpower at their disposal," he said.

Larissa a Ruins

Shortly before I talked with these officers I saw daring airmen of the German luftwaffe attempting to put the finishing touches to Larissa as a ruins.

(This was the first indication that Larissa, 40 miles below Mount Olympus, and toward which the Germans are driving in a swinging arc through Grevena, had been shattered by German bombs although the Greeks have reported heavy aerial attacks there.)

Already rocked by bombs the city was attacked by waves of Nazi fighter planes which swept upon it, bombing and machine-gunning and setting parts of the city ablaze.

Later relays of German bombers, attacking through the night, unloaded cargo after cargo of bombs until Larissa looked like Louvain in the last war.

All of Larissa's civilians have been evacuated.

(A British-relayed Greek radio announcement admitted that the Germans had driven to within "several miles" of Larissa, but it was denied that they had entered the city of 25,000 population and key railroad and highway terminus on the Salambria River 135 miles northwest of Athens.

(Larissa is an ancient city of wars and the chief city of the department of Larissa. Many of its inhabitants are Turks.)

The fiercest sort of tank battle occurred at Grevena, 60 miles into Greece on the Vistritsa directly west of Mount Olympus, when fleets of British tanks sped there to aid the hard-pressed Greeks and battle the German tide.

One British squadron of tanks battled the German "Panzers" for six hours without a break.

"We faced lanes of enemy tanks coming along roads which were really cart tracks," I was told by the fatigued members of the British tank corps.

"Odds Against Us"

"We don't know what the odds were but they were certainly all against us. The enemy also had its inevitable dive-bombers which, with fighter planes, razed telephone wires and communications generally.

"From in between the enemy tanks armored motorcycle units would shoot out now and then.

"We faced every kind of warfare the mind of man can imagine.

"But we shot our way out without losing a single tank to the enemy. Many of the enemy's tanks were smashed by our fire."

In this terrific battle now under way the Germans are using dive-bombers as artillery, spreading them out in great waves just as in France the Nazis employed armadas of planes night and day.

It was reminiscent of the western front in Flanders, this aerial assault.

I watched the tracer bullets of fighter planes slashing through the sky throughout the night, trying to prevent the British imperial troops from obtaining any rest and to wear down their nerves.

"The bombing and machine gunning has been awful," a brawny Australian soldier told me, "but we have held the enemy."

At Servia Pass, just south of the Vistritsa River and about 15 miles west of Mount Olympus, fighting of almost unprecedented savagery has been underway.

The Australians have smashed waves of German infantry jamming Servia Pass in attacks from dawn to darkness until the ground is choked with dead.

Then the German tanks try to smash through but are blown up by mines or stopped by antitank guns while their crews are caught in the murderous fire of British Bren guns.

On the flanks of the Servia Pass sector the Austrian Alpine Chasseurs have been constantly scaling mountain peaks which to me seemed impassable.

Greeks Retreating In Crucial Battle

bania, particularly north of Argirocastro and Klissura, but the government spokesman said they had been driven back. He added that the Italians had succeeded in occupying Kiafa Karits, north of the Apsos River, after repeated attacks.

The fall of Kalabaka, whence a railroad runs down the plains south through Trikkala and curves back to Larissa, a key point on the Allied east wing, would menace the whole British-Greek right and would open the plains of Thessaly.

The British and Greek forces, the Greek spokesman announced earlier were "furiously and steadily maintaining an unbroken defense line" before Kalabaka, but he added:

"Nobody conceals that the situation is serious. There is raging a battle whose outcome will be decisive."

Aside from the mighty Nazi thrust at the center, this appeared to be the broad and violent pattern of their assault:

On the Allied east—British informants declared that Australian troops protecting the Allied right anchor about Mount Olympus were holding firm against unceasing German attacks launched in an effort to break through Sarandaporon Pass near Servia, just to the northeast of the mountain itself.

Here, the British declared, the Germans were being cut down in great numbers and late in the day had not been able to break the Aussie line. In that one area, five German dive-bombers were reported shot down by Bren guns and a tank company.

An observer just returned from the Olympus line declared tonight that mass Nazi infantry and tank attacks south of Servia has cost the Germans "two divisions of casualties in two days."

Despite such enormous losses, he asserted, the Nazi command was "throwing away men by the thousands" in an effort to break through.

The Germans, he added, were using no less than ten divisions—120,000 to 150,000 men—in that sector in an attempt to force their way through regardless of cost and hundreds of bomber and fighter planes were joining the attack on the Allied troops.

On the Allied west—the Germans were smashing heavily at Metsovo Pass, which opens the way for a descent on the Allied western anchor town of Ioannina.

The attack everywhere was on a familiar Nazi pattern:

Stukas came over to attack at close range with heavy bombs used like long-range artillery fire, and the tanks charged forward from behind in successive waves.

The advance upon Kalabaka appeared particularly costly, for south of the already occupied area of Grevena the invaders ran into a fortified mountain range.

British and Greek artillery batteries and machine guns, planted thick in the rough terrain, were said in dispatches from the front to be inflicting high casualties among the Germans.

R. A. F. headquarters, announcing a continuing British bombing campaign against the Germans, told of "unceasing attacks" on Nazi supply columns extending to far back of the present fighting front. Railway lines and stations, and an Axis convoy east of Salonika, the Greek Mediterranean port, were said to have been heavily raided.

De Gaulle Goes to Athens

Rome (Friday), April 18 (U.P.).—The official Stefani news agency reported from Salonika last night that Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the Free French movement, had arrived in Athens to reach an accord with British and Greek military leaders "for eventual participation of strong contingents of Free French troops in the Battle of Greece."

De Gualle arrived by airplane, accompanied by Gen. Georges Catroux, Stefani reported. They were said to have come for conferences with Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, of Britain, and Field Marshal Alexander Papagos, of Greece.

ously attacking for eight hours, declaring:

"They just wouldn't have had fields to fly from or room to fly if there had been any more."

Notables among the dead—the total still unknown—included Lord Stamp, government economic adviser; his lady and his eldest son, and Lord Auckland, prominent amateur wild-animal trainer well known in America.

Increased Talk of Invasion

Serious talk that this might be the forerunner of invasion gained increasing attention. Some well-informed observers said this was just the sort of punch to be expected as the opening stroke of an invasion.

But most persons felt and hoped that the raid was only what the German high command called it: "Reprisal" for the lashing Britain gave Berlin April 9.

The Evening Standard, published by Aircraft Production Minister Lord Beaverbrook, declared "the new assault may be a prelude to attempted invasion," and urged the nation to turn out "tanks to meet their tanks; guns to pierce their armor."

Accurate tallies of the dead, wounded and the gigantic property damage were impossible. The air and home security ministries announced tersely that casualties were "heavy" and damage "considerable."

Behind that announcement lay this picture:

A pall of smoke still hung over all London. Hoselines twined through miles of wrecked and charred buildings.

Over many of them flapped defiantly the flags of the British Union. Throughout the city there was a rush on stores as owness of wrecked homes bought flags to hang from gaping windows.

Morgues were filled with the dead, and hospitals with the injured. At least eight hospitals were smashed by direct hits of the Nazi "super" bombs.

There were streets and lanes blanketed from end to end with broken bricks, shattered glass and the splintered bits of buildings.

Before a theater an old charwoman, sucking on a cigarette, scrubbed the sidewalk on hands and knees. The back of the theater had been bombed away.

Stenographers and clerks lined up outside offices where they had worked but yesterday. Today the places were wrecked. One employer borrowed a desk and set up his office on the sidewalk.

Thousands of persons gathered to watch firemen still working on blazes in the shells of what had been stores, churches and apartments.

Streets Filled With Debris

One gathering's curiosity turned to horror as a six-story wall suddenly toppled. The spectators fled, but when the dust settled the firemen were still at work.

Workers, who spent hours getting to their jobs this morning, trudged home in the evening through the streets filled with shattered glass and debris—inanimate tokens of the high explosives and fire bombs which rained on London from early Wednesday night until the fiery dawn brought respite.

At one of the bombed hospitals, a surgeon had just completed a delicate operation, extracting a piece of glass from a man's eye, when a bomb tore down the door of the operating room and scattered instruments over the floor. Oddly, no one was hurt there.

Of the numerous churches destroyed, one dated from the fourteenth century.

A girl in whose arms a 3-year-old child died at the height of the raid went home to sleep—after finishing her regular eight hours of work at her office.

Nearby Sheep Browse Quietly

Beside a 20-foot bomb crater in a West End street another girl sat studiously sketching the grimy workers.

An old woman with a bandage on her head sat sadly on the steps of what had been her home, while around the corner two small boys swung cricket bats.

The remains of a stately ornamental iron fence around what had been an ancient church lay spattered over the street. Across the way a flock of sheep browsed quietly on the green grass of a fenced park.

Water poured from the top floor of a world famous department store; down a side street rolled a shiny horse-drawn carriage, the silk-hatted driver skillfully cracking his whip.

A vicar in his shirt sleeves and a fellow clergyman, incongruous in cassock and steel helmet, braved fire and falling debris to salvage pictures and books from their church.

At another church a number of men and women took shelter. A bomb killed two and injured many. Five fire watchers were killed at yet another church.

"Too Late for a Drink"

At another spot, two men were dug unhurt from the wreckage of a shelter where they had been buried for 12 hours.

"What time is it?" asked one.

When told, he lamented that the pubs were closed, and complained: "Blimey, it's too late for a drink."

Several firemen died when a bomb hit the foot of the high ladder on which they were fighting flames.

On post where a German bomber was shot down—one of six bagged during the night—a policeman rescued a German flier who was dangling by his parachute from the roof of a tall building. This airman and his three companions were hustled off to jail, but had to be moved to another almost immediately when a time bomb fell close by.

A number of overseas troops were in a club damaged by a direct hit. Some were entombed, others thrown into the street. One Canadian who fell 40 feet was unharmed.

A husband and wife, asleep when a bomb hit their house, were blown into the street—still snugly tucked into bed.

A "number" of ambulance drivers were killed when their first aid depot was hit.

The fashionable West End was bomb-blasted and burned extensively. Mansions and rich apartment houses and stores were shattered.

One victim there was a night club proprietor who was killed as he did fire-spotting duty.

Two barmaids and a bartender were killed in a public house.

A storage depot was wrecked, but furniture which had been stored there from No. 11 Downing Street—residence of the chancellors of the exchequer—was saved intact.

A heavy toll of death was feared where a bomb fell into the courtyard of a workers' apartment house. A surface shelter there collapsed, trapping many.

British Fleet Shells Axis Fort in Libya

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 17.—Defenders of the British garrison at Tobruk, Libya, fighting bitterly against mechanized Axis forces, captured 25 officers and hundreds of men and destroyed 20 tanks while British naval units shelled Fort Capuzzo, near the Egyptian frontier, it was announced officially tonight.

The British Middle East headquarters said a British patrol had successfully penetrated enemy positions outside Tobruk and had captured seven Italian officers and 139 men in a single phase of yesterday's operations. Axis dead during the day were placed above 200.

Officers said that an Axis attack on Tobruk was repulsed by artillery fire, while patrol activity continued at a high pitch in the Salum, Egypt, area and further progress was made by troops pushing on in Ethiopia. In Addis Ababa, 5,000 Italians and 4,000 of their colonial troops already are prisoners.

The work of the Tobruk defenders, the British said, brought to at least 1,500 the number of German casualties, wounded and prisoners, in the desert campaign and increased the number of tanks destroyed to 35. The British losses were reported to be light.

The naval shelling of the Libyan Fort Capuzzo, apparently was carried out by the same naval units which yesterday were credited with destroying an eight-ship convoy in an attack on the Axis-African supply line.

While the ships shelled the fort, which has changed hands several times in the current conflict, British aircraft attacked a motorized column nearby and claimed destruction of a number of vehicles.

An Admiralty communique called the Fort Capuzzo attack "an extremely successful naval bombardment," and said that shells were seen to burst on a concentration of about 100 Axis tanks.

The airdrome at Ain El Gazala and its supply dump also were bombarded both from air and sea. Air and naval units were said to have recently shot down at least two Junkers 88 dive-bombers and to have damaged two others.

British columns were reported operating along all main roads in northern Ethiopia, taking prisoners as they moved, while in the southern section of the country they said they were joined by native troops who have deserted from Fascist forces.

attack was the "biggest and most effective yet carried out on Britain's capital, both in number of planes used and in the number of explosive and incendiary bombs dropped."

The German high command warned that British attacks on German residential areas would be subject to reprisals similar to this latest raid, which it said was in retaliation for the R. A. F. bombing of Berlin April 9.

Bombs along Unter Den Linden that night destroyed the German state opera house, started a serious blaze in the attic of the Prussian state library and damaged Bellevue Castle, the state guest house, and the modern art gallery, formerly the crown prince's residence.

In other fighting, authorized quarters reported speedboat attacks off the southeast coast of England in which four merchantmen aggregating 13,000 tons were declared sunk.

Air attacks, it was said, resulted in the sinking of a 2,000-ton freighter northeast of the Thames, the damaging of four others of 28,000 tons in St. George's Channel, and the probable sinking of a 5,000-tonner 250 miles west of Ireland.

Germans declared these attacks brought the total of shipping space sunk or damaged in the last 48 hours to 137,000 tons, including 89,000 tons off Greece.

In northern Africa, the German version of the situation was that the British still were beleaguered at Tobruk and making efforts to break out while the Axis air force hammered transport facilities in the harbor.

2 Killed, 2 Injured As Fire Destroys 3-Story Dwelling

Two persons were burned to death and two others were injured leaping from third floor windows when fire early today destroyed a three-story dwelling at 210 C Street Southwest.

One of the dead was tentatively identified as Andrew Martin, colored, 56. Identification of the second person killed was not immediately possible.

The two injured in leaping to escape the fire were rushed to Providence Hospital, where it was reported they could not be identified. Both were colored.

The building, occupied, police said, by ten colored persons, was destroyed when flames originating in the basement spread with almost explosive speed to the top floor. Cause of the blaze was not determined at once.

Italy Expects Greek Defense To Collapse

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 17.—The Italians, declared to be again fighting on Greek soil, officially asserted tonight that the first line of Greek resistance had been broken in both Greece and Albania and that "the entire enemy front is in crisis."

It was tantamount to a claim that Greek resistance was on the point of a general collapse so far as it faced the Italian offensive.

(A British dispatch from Cairo, Egypt, described the Greek situation in Albania as "serious" and said that Greek troops may be forced to withdraw from that country.

(A considerable force of Germans, freed from action in Yugoslavia, it was said, succeeded in pushing back Greek forces which had been in a position to protect the retreat of other Greek troops in the Albanian sector.

Reporting a substantial cleanup of Albania, into which Fascist forces were pressed back last November, military dispatches said that men of both the Ninth and Eleventh armies had entered Greek homeland territory at several points, officially unidentified.

thresholds if necessary. And there they died.

At no time in nine days' wandering did I see masses of refugees fleeing bombed towns.

The civilians did their part but the military did not have a chance.

For almost from the first hour that the Germans attacked, the army was without communication.

One division did not even know what the one next to it was doing.

Individually, the Serbian army fought with great bravery, and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans. In one day's attack the military reported the destruction of 200 German tanks.

But as the Germans drove their wedges into the country, the fighting became hopeless.

I say the Serbian army fought—because in traveling about I have seen scores of Croatian deserters. And in the midst of the fighting officials said the Croats revolted in the north.

I was in Belgrade the morning the Germans attacked. I heard the sirens and the roar of the bombing planes, but the people who did not know the nation was at war stood in the streets and did not take shelter—not that there were enough shelters even if they wanted to do so.

It was a massacre.

Bombs fell by the hundreds on helpless civilians. Incendiaries started huge fires and the city was covered with a pall of smoke.

My hotel was burned to the ground. The United States, British and Greek Legations were among the first buildings destroyed, as were most government buildings.

Almost from the first raid there was no water and fires raged unchecked.

Broken bodies dotted every street. For two days the bombing went on, leaving the city a shambles.

With several companions I started after the government toward the interior. We slept in ditches and barns, lived on handouts from the good-hearted peasants who refused payment.

Bombing planes continuously strafed villages and roads, but we arrived in Sarajevo in time for another air blitzkrieg.

This city where an assassination touched off the first great war was reduced to a mass of flaming wreckage.

Smoke curled toward the towering mountains from the flaming minarets of Moslem churches which dot the city. Flimsy wooden sheds of the great bazaar in this "most Oriental city in Europe" were a fiery mass after the first bombs dropped.

From Sarajevo we went southwest into Montenegro on the Adriatic.

Here we ran into an abortive fifth column attempt which was nipped promptly by army leaders.

Traitors were lined up against the wall and shot down.

As we reached the seacoast it became apparent that resistance would not exceed guerrilla warfare. Along the roads we met determined Serb soldiers in small groups who wanted to keep fighting but they were leaderless.

Taxes to Tap 2,000,000 New Purses

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Sweeping increases of from 25 to 50 per cent in all present Federal tax rates and a return to stiff World War excises were projected yesterday in the most ambitious tax program yet laid before a Congress.

Tight-lipped and pledged to secrecy, Congressional tax consultants returned to the Capitol still breathless from Treasury outlines of pay as you go tax plans to increase Federal revenue one-third and dip into more than 2,000,000 new pockets.

Overlooking nothing that will ring tax dollars into defense program cash registers, alternative schedules will be laid down before the House Ways and Means Committee in executive session on Monday.

Steps Contemplated

To raise the huge sum, Capitol tax spokesmen said, most of the following steps may be necessary:

Bolstering individual income tax returns by raising the present 10 per cent defense tax by 33 1-3 per cent.

Increase in the corporate income tax from the 24 per cent now levied to 30 or 32 per cent.

A boost in the normal income tax rate from 4 per cent to the 6 per cent minimum World War rate, or higher.

Lowering of the existing $2,000 exemption for married persons to $1,800 or even $1,500, with the $800 single exemption either left as it is or slightly lowered.

Upward revision of the excess profits tax to serve the dual purpose of curbing defense profits and swelling tax receipts.

Reviving the more lucrative of the Old World War excise taxes and increasing present excises an average of 33 1-3 per cent.

Congressional tax specialists, who had been expecting a program of only $1,500,000,000, now discuss departures from orthodox tax forms, such as a tax on salaries or wages above a set figure.

While the Administration still veered from application of a general manufacturers' excise (sales) tax, a recombing of untaxed commodities and services for those most productive foreshadowed the widest invasion of this "nuisance tax" field since post-World War days.

Soft drinks, which produced $58,000,000 in revenue in 1921 and now would yield more; war taxes on issuance of insurance policies; bank check taxes, repealed after wide public protest; taxes on transportation by rail, freight and water, and scores of other excises repealed since the first World War appeared due for resurvey.

Members talked of excises on slot machines and juke boxes, a lean producer in the last war but now widely in use; excises on beauty parlor and tonsorial services, and excursions into other consumer fields not seriously considered before the peak tax goal was set.

Doughton Confident

Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he thought every dollar recommended by Morgenthau would be raised; that Congress with the Treasury's help will determine the methods.

"This is no ordinary emergency, and we are not going to pass on the cost of it to the next generation," said Doughton. "Every dollar will be raised that can be raised without disrupting our economic system."

Managing the Senate Finance Committee during the illness of Chairman Pat Harrison, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, said the program "contemplates as nearly as can be realized that the defense program will be financed by two dollars out of taxes and one dollar out of borrowing."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who Tuesday called on Americans to face "grim realities" of defense tax needs, called it "a very brave program" and said he was in complete agreement on the pay-as-you-go goal.

Vandenberg stressed that approval of the $3,500,000,000 objective by all parties present at the conference did not imply approval of proposed tax methods. He said the program "assumes more than raising two-thirds of the $19,000,000,000 we are now scheduled to spend in the next fiscal year. It assumes that the spending figure will stay at $19,000,000,000."

C. I. O. Files Strike Notice Against General Motors

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), announced tonight that his union, which only Saturday concluded a ten-day strike at the Ford Motor Co., was filing a five-day notice of intention to strike against General Motors Corporation.

A one-year union-corporation agreement on wages and working conditions expires Sunday, and Thomas said that a strike "if necessary," would be carried out to enforce U. A. W.-C. I. O. demands for a new proposed agreement.

State law requires a five-day "cooling off period" before a strike may be called, and the period can be extended to 30 days in the case of defense work.

A short time before Thomas' announcement, the U. A. W.-C. I. O. headquarters here declared that local unions covering 61 General Motors plants were being instructed to take strike votes by next Thursday.

160,000 Men Affected

The 61 plants, the union said, employ approximately 160,000 men.

The union has claimed that numerous locals already have authorized a strike vote.

In statements heretofore, union leaders have said a strike in General Motors plants would be so organized as not to interfere with national defense work, but corporation spokesmen have said this would be impossible.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's General Motors department, said the instructions for a strike vote by the locals were not given to 13 plants holding $442,500,000 in defense orders.

Union and General Motors officials have been negotiating for several weeks over a new agreement, and the union has charged the corporation with refusing to meet "just demands." Yesterday James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, came here to assist in the parleys.

The present agreement covers more than three score General Motors plants in the Nation employing upward of 175,000 men. Thomas pointed out that the strike notice involved only Michigan plants, of which there are 30-odd.

Asked if strikes would follow in all G. M. plants in the country if one were called in Michigan, the union president said, however, "it (the strike) will probably be called in all of them."

1,000 Go on Strike At Roebling Plants

Trenton, N. J., April 17 (AP).—C. I. O. organizers called a strike today at the steel wire and cable plants of the John A. Roebling Sons Co.

About 1,000 workers were absent from the two Roebling plants in Trenton and Roebling, N. J., company representatives said. The company has recently employed 5,000 workers, some on defense orders.

Workers walked out in protest of a new production schedule Morris Malmignati, a C. I. O. organizer, said.

The strike call followed closely company announcements of an average 10-cent-an-hour pay increase.

600 Idle in Ohio

Youngstown, Ohio, April 17 (AP).—About 600 employes of the Youngstown Steel Door Co., manufacturer of railroad box car doors, were idle today because of a walkout of C. I. O. steel workers.

Aluminum Strike Threat

Los Angeles, April 17 (AP).—Officials of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers said today they were prepared to call a strike of 1,000 workers at the Aluminum Co. of America plant April 27 unless the National Labor Relations Board set the date for a plant election by that time.

Underwriters Ask Exemption In Utility Sale

By the Associated Press

Asserting that competitive bidding would not be practicable, Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., asked the Securities Commission yesterday for an exemption which would permit it to collect a fee as managing underwriter in the proposed sale of $120,000,000 of debentures of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation.

Harold Stanley, president of the underwriting firm, disclosed at a hearing before Trial Examiner Richard Townsend that his company had an agreement with the SEC on an impounding arrangement for its fee in order to avoid any possible delay to the proposed issue.

Subsequently, Stanley said, he asked the commission to consider an exemption from the arms-length bargaining rule which prohibits payment of a fee to an underwriter believed to be an affiliate of the issuer, when its participation exceeds five per cent of the issue. It was after that request, that the SEC handed down its decision in the Dayton Power & Light case, holding that Morgan Stanley could not collect its fee because of overlapping interests.

Edward Reynolds, president of Columbia Gas, testified that the idea of the refunding program originated with his company and that it then had asked Morgan Stanley to "prepare themselves to be the managing underwriters."

Reynolds said that it "seems to us completely impractical to obtain our objective by competitive bidding."

Stanley said that it was not likely that two groups of adequate strength to handle such an issue could be mustered because "in my opinion the united effort of a major portion of the underwriting and distributing firms is needed to market the proposed issue."

He disclosed that the proposed participation of Morgan Stanley would be $6,875,000, or 5.7 per cent of the total which would be distributed among 129 underwriters and marketed through an additional 400 to 600 investment dealers.

Underwriters participating in an aggregate of $1,000,000 or more include:

Mellon Securities Corporation, Pottsburgh, $4,950,000; Drexel & Co., Philadelphia, $1,200,000; Harris, Hall & Co., Chicago, $1070,000, and these New York firms:

Dillon, Read & Co.; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Smith Barney & Co., $4,950,000 each; Blyth & Co., Inc., Bonbright & Co., Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., and Kidder Peabody & Co., $4,000,000 each; Goldman, Sachs & Co., W. E. Hutton & Co., Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., Lazard Freres & Co., and Lehman Bros., $3,000,000 each; Union Securities Corporation, $3,300,000; Lee Higginson Corporation, $2,900,000; White, Weld & Co., $2,700,000; Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., $2,000,000.

Glore, Forgan & Co. and Tucker, Anthony & Co., $1,200,000 each; Clark Dodge & Co., Coffin & Burr, Inc., Dominick & Dominick, Estabrook & Co., W. C. Langley & Co., F. S. Moseley & Co., E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc, Shields & Co., and Spencer Trask & Co., $1,070,000 each.

Sumners Pleads District Suffrage Cause

Wilbur S. Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association, who had testified previously, volunteered the information that he had nothing to do with insertion of the clause.

Senator Capper said he thought the resolution "the best bill on the subject," but denied responsibility for the self-government provision.

A check of the records disclosed that the present Capper-Sumners resolution is identical, in this respect, to a suffrage resolution reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee last year. The present bill would authorize Congress to give the District national representation as well as self-government.

Sumners declared it "very poor strategy" to pair self-government and national representation in the same constitutional amendment.

"If I were living in the District, and being convinced, as I am, that there is no need of a constitutional amendment, I wouldn't impair the chances of national representation by putting this language in the bill," he declared.

Declaring the "right to govern yourself" to be an "inherent right" stemming from the concept of a sovereign people, Sumners stated that Congress, if it desired, could give "Washingtonians the right to vote for their own officers.

"I think it ridiculous," he said, "to suppose that the founders of the Nation who were willing to give Congress the power to declare war and take all our money by taxation, could not entrust Congress to use its latest and best judgment for the District of Columbia."

Sumners made no suggestion as to what, if any, form of self-government he thought should be given the city, but, with one exception, all other witnesses urged self-rule. Finch declared that Congress, "either prior to or simultaneously with the passage of this resolution," should enact legislation to:

"Place control of local affairs in the hands of District citizens to the full extent permissible under the present provisions of the Constitution and compatible with the interests of the Federal Government."

"The people of the District are completely disorganized and have no spokesman," Finch added. "But if we had self-government we'd be in a much better position to put this Constitutional amendment over."

Finch said supporters of self-rule have in mind the recommendation in 1937 of the Citizens Efficiency Committee for a city council to be delegated specific ordinance-making powers covering police, traffic, health, welfare and similar municipal functions.

"It is conceivable . . . that at some date in the not distant future, the problems incident to the management of the affairs of this city may become so great that it will be practically impossible for our friends in Congress to devote their time and their energies to them."

Finch declared that he did not believe anyone, in or out of Congress, seriously believed that the framers of the Constitution meant "that instrument should be construed a century and a half later as a denial of any right, political or otherwise, to a group of American citizens equal in numbers to one-fifth of the total population of the young Nation they created . . ."

The founding fathers were preoccupied with establishing a Nation, Finch said, to give consideration to how their Capital City should be governed.

Washington residents, Finch said, feel the "stigma" of disenfranchisement. For that reason, he added, they raise a constant clamor before Congress for laws and regulations. Give Washington self-government, he said, and "the people will let you alone."

Mrs. Leslie B. Wright of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, said that she, personally, would "hate to stop coming up here and bothering you." She reported her organization against local suffrage, but for national representation.

Residents of the States, said Miss Anna E. Hendley, one of the founders of the Society of Natives and whose family has lived in the city for four generations, "can't understand why the people of Washington should not have a chance to vote for representatives in Congress."

Pat A. Sugrue, past department commander of the American Legion; Kenneth P. Armstrong, treasurer of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Etta L. Taggart also spoke for the resolution.

Washington newspaper editors, announced McCarran, who have written for years about District government, will be given a chance to testify at the next subcommittee session at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Smoot Firm Accused of Pay Act Violation

The Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation was accused of continued violation of the Wage and Hour Act in a suit filed in the District Court yesterday by Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Labor Department Wage and Hour Division.

Col. Fleming asked the court to issue an injunction compelling the Smoot firm to obey the law.

The suit asserted that the Smoot company employs 200 men in dredging gravel from the Potomac River and other sources and that the product is moved in interstate commerce. Since the law went into effect October 24, 1938, the complaint charged, the Smoot firm has worked men longer than the lawful work week, paid hourly wages below the minimum set by law and failed to keep records provided by regulations of the administrator. Some of the records that were kept, the suit said, were "inaccurate and inadequate."

The complaint was signed by three Labor Department attorneys, Gerard D. Reilly, solicitor; Irving J. Levy, assistant solicitor, and John J. Babb, principal attorney.

Officers of the Smoot company could not be reached yesterday for comment.

Little Green House To Be Torn Down

it in the years preceding the raucous early twenties has been lost in the misty past. When Warren G. Harding took office as President of the United States in 1921, and the Ohio Gang followed him to town, it was leased by an Ohio politician turned lobbyist. In the next two years it was the scene of Presidential poker parties and revelry of a more spectacular sort among the President's camp followers.

Headline Names Knew It

Jess Smith knew it intimately, big, booming Jess Smith who came here from Washington Court House, Ohio, to die in a big hotel room with a pistol in his hand and his head in a metal wastebasket. Harry Daugherty, Attorney General of the United States, knew it well; so did Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior, and Senators and officeholders down through the whole structure of Government.

The Little Green House on K Street came to public notice when the fabric of the Harding regime suddenly collapsed and laid bare its rotting framework. Time and again, in testimony before Senate committees and before courts of law, the Little Green House was named as the scene of questionable transactions. The public read of it until the public, from Bangor to Butte, knew it as well as did the residents of K Street and came from afar to stand and look at it as one of the attractions of the Nation's Capital.

For these last dozen years the Little Green House has been forgotten in the press of passing events. Soon there will be nothing at all left of it but its memory, and that already has faded like the pale green stones which gave it its name have faded in the sun and the rain.

child in the country, it would mean for them an average tax increase of $26.06, boosting the total per capita average tax to $95.56.

The unprecedented program was planned as a double-edged fiscal weapon, both to raise money and to spike the inflation threat by digging deep into the wage earner's defense-boom income.

President Roosevelt has given the plan his complete approval and intends in due time to explain it to the Nation, Morgenthau said.

Morgenthau termed the meeting "one of the most satisfactory we have ever had."

With considerable satisfaction, he told reporters that he had obtained approval of the Congressional leaders of both parties for his formula for raising two-thirds of the $19,000,000,000 by taxation and one-third by deficit financing.

The actual figures, he emphasized, were not final and might fluctuate as much as 10 per cent up or down.

The Treasury Secretary firmly declined to divulge the details of his financing program, saying only that the next step will be for Treasury spokesmen to testify before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, where revenue bills originate.

Morgenthau admitted that the large share to be raised by "pay as you go" methods was expected to prove a blow at the inflation danger.

"This is an important method of keeping prices down," he added.

This antiinflation aspect of the plan led reporters to ask if that meant that direct taxes on consumers, such as a sales tax, consistently opposed in the last session by the Administration, were being planned.

"The question is a good one, but I am going to beg off," Morgenthau replied, advising questioners to wait and hear testimony before Congress.

About $6,330,000,000 will have to be borrowed next year, Morgenthau said. He hoped to obtain as much of this as possible by sale of the new Defense Savings Bonds and stamps, would borrow some more from Social Security reserve funds, and would have to raise the remainder by large-scale borrowing in the usual security markets, at the rate of about $500,000,000 a month.

The Treasury chief expressed hope that Congress would not complicate the fiscal picture by approving unbudgeted non-defense expenditures, such as the $450,000,000 farm payment fund that Congress is now proposing to add to the Agriculture supply bill.

With mingled pride and awe, the Secretary said he thought it would be safe to say that the tax program is the "biggest in the world."

Mrs. Schuler Indicted in Marine Slaying

An indictment charging first degree murder was returned yesterday against Mrs. Helen Schuler, 20, of Richmond, Va., in the fatal stabbing Sunday of Marine Private Aubrey Heyl, 24, Warrenton, at Quantico, after a special grand jury hearing in the Prince William County Courthouse at Manassas, Va., according to Commonwealth's Attorney William Brown.

Mrs. Schuler pleaded not guilty to the indictment before Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Sixteenth Virginia Judicial Circuit. Brown said. She was returned to the Prince William County jail under $10,000 bond, to await trial at 11 a. m., Tuesday before Judge McCarthy.

Ralph Bethel, attorney and member of Richmond City Council, said he will represent Mrs. Schuler, and added that he will seek to establish self-defense as motive for the slaying.

'Taxpayers' Hit Pay Rise Plan

The Washington Taxpayers Association yesterday issued a statement opposing a bill sponsored by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, to increase pay of District firemen and policemen.

The total added expense to be borne by taxpayers would amount to $1,590,000, it was stated, and would require a rise in the tax rate of about 12 cents.

"With increasing municipal needs resulting from the defense program it is questionable to say the least if the city can afford these generous pay boosts, particularly as firemen and policemen are well paid compared to most District government employes," the statement said.

defense - industry factories," he added.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York City, who was elected president general of the D. A. R. for a three-year administration, was hailed last night, along with her slate of 13 other officers, when election results were announced. Mrs. Pouch received 1,813 votes. Mrs. Frank L. Nason, registrar general, was given 56 complimentary votes.

In the only election race to develop this year, the following were elected vice presidents general at large:

Mrs. William Wesley Brothers, of Pocatello, Idaho, 1,308 votes; Mrs. James Donahue, Cleveland, Ohio, 1,271; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, of Washington, 1,235; and Mrs. Elly Ruff Barnes, of Montgomery, Ala. Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, Va., and Mrs. Thomas Clair Maguire, of Plant City, Fla., were unsuccessful candidates by a close margin.

Many Jobs for D. A. R.

Pointing out tasks for the D. A. R. to do in their communities in the national defense program, McNutt said:

"When families of defense workers are compelled to set up housekeeping in concrete sewer pipes unloaded on a railroad siding, there is work for the Daughters of the American Revolution to do.

"When a community has to house a makeshift school for children of defense workers in an abandoned one-room church, unheated, unsanitary and totally unequipped—and then can take care of only a fraction of its new school population—there is a job for the Daughters of the American Revolution," McNutt said.

"It would be an invaluable service if your local units made a door-to-door survey of available housing accommodations and set up a community room-registration bureau," so that trainees on leave might be brought into a family environment, McNutt suggested.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, retiring president general, in her message last night on "The Defense of the National Society," urged that it strengthen its present activities, rather than spreading itself thin by increasing the number of its national committees.

Need For Service

"The time of great gifts is gone, but not the time of great service. The responsibility must shift more upon the average member. We must watch for the things which we can do without money," she added.

"A great constructive step in its internal administration would be accomplished if all effort for national election could be confined entirely to the last year of each administration," she suggested.

"This society can never reach its highest possibilities until it controls unfounded rumor. While calling upon the citizens of the country to be alert to the dangers of propaganda within the Nation, the society must be equally alert to the effects of propaganda within the organization," she said, without being more specific.

"The person who attempts to affect full decision by spreading foolish and impossible rumors is the fifth columnist, which the society must fear and control. The person who knowingly passes on rumors which upon analysis they know could not be true is the betteur of the society," Mrs. Robert said.

She recounted some of the achievements of the society in recent years as follows:

Underwood & Underwood

MRS. LOUISE M. HEATON, of Clarksdale, Miss., is the newly elected national president of the Children of the American Revolution

"Actual recorded gifts to the society's 14 approved schools of $156,000 in one year, 70 per cent more than in any single year in which accurate records have been kept.

"One-half million copies of the Society's Manual for Citizenship, an increase of 125,000 distributed in one year.

"More than 30,000 copies of the Constitution of the United States distributed.

"Attainment of a total of 217,000 Junior American Citizens, a gain in one year of nearly as many members as the total enrollment at the beginning of this Administration.

"Approximately 4,000,000 trees planted on barren mountain sides to safeguard our resources of the future.

"Contribution of nearly $500,000 toward human conservation and service at local headquarters of the American Red Cross reaching a total of 710,000 work hours or . . . the continuous time of one worker at a 40-hour week for 341 years."

Warning that "the society must not expect to be popular," Mrs. Robert pointed out that "within recent years there has come a new appreciation of the soundness of the society's opinion upon national defense and subversive activities over a long period of years."

Unopposed Officers

The slate of unopposed officers, elected with Mrs. Pouch, were: First Vice President General, Mrs. Joseph G. Forney, Pennsylvania; Second Vice President General, Mrs. John Whittier Howe Hodge, California; Third Vice President General, Mrs. Floyd William Bennison, Minnesota; Chaplain General, Mrs. William Henry Belk, North Carolina; Recording Secretary General, Mrs. William H. Schlosser, Indiana; Corresponding Secretary General, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, Colorado; Organizing Secretary General, Miss Marion D. Mullins, Texas; Treasurer General, Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell, Illinois; Registrar General, Mrs. Edward Webb Coach, Delaware; Librarian General, Mrs. Ralph L. Crockett, New Hampshire; Historian General, Mrs. Frederick Alfred Wallis, Kentucky; Curator General, Mrs. C. Edward Murray, New Jersey; Reporter General to the Smithsonian Institution, Mrs. Harry E. Narey, Iowa.

New officers were presented at last night's session, after voting had taken place at 8 a. m. to 2 p. m. yesterday. Mrs. Frank Madison Dick, of Cambridge, Md., was named Honorary Vice President General.

Resolution Is Adopted

Earlier yesterday the Continental Congress unanimously adopted a resolution urging that employes on public pay rolls be required to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution.

Applauded an appeal for strengthening of Pan-American understanding and cooperation, in an address by Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State.

Heard a warning of drastic sacrifices by people of the United States before Hitler is defeated, in an address by H. V. Kaltenborn, radio commentator.

By a rising vote, the congress adopted the oath of allegiance resolution after discussion by only one member. Miss Janet Richards, charter member of the D. A. R., said that some persons on the public pay roll in Washington "are under suspicion" of subversive action.

In another resolution, the D. A. R. commended the U. S. Department of Justice for "the efficient achievement of registration" of aliens and commended "the purpose of proposed legislation to provide legal status for worthy resident aliens and to deport both criminal and enemy aliens of the United States."

With Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York City, unopposed candidate for a three-year term as president general and with her slate of 13 other officers unopposed, election interest yesterday centered in the race of six candidates for four posts as vice president general. With the polls closing yesterday afternoon, the new officers were presented at the night session at Constitution Hall.

Long, in his address on "Pan America and Hemisphere Defense" stated "there is no threat within the hemisphere to our respective independence or freedom; our total cooperation is our mutual protection."

"It is with renewed vigor and determination today we turn aside from the quiet of our ordinary lives to prepare to repel the only real challenge which has ever been made to the institutions your ancestors founded," he told the D. A. R.

Threat to Hemisphere

"The threat against these institutions of ours is directed not alone at us but at our whole hemisphere . . . The nations of the Americas, in the face of this great threat are now actively engaged in the defense of our hemisphere," Long pointed out.

"Despite difficulties imposed by the facts of economics—notably the presence of competitive products in certain of the American nations with attendant problems of exchange—the hemisphere as a whole is remarkably self-sufficient, and, through the cooperation of its component states, is finding it possible to solve these problems and to maintain its economic equilibrium until such time as trade with the rest of the world again becomes possible. In other words, there is an economic basis for Pan-Americanism, as well as the political basis."

Kaltenborn, at another session, asked, "Since when is it a tradition of the United States to avoid risks?" as he pointed out inevitable risks of aiding one side in the European war. Applause came after that question.

The people of the United States "are ready for more aggressive leadership'" than has been given them, he said. "They can take it. They're getting ready to face the music."

German Revolution Unlikely

He said he knew the German people, and the effect of "the great squeeeze being applied to the mass" of the people, but he said he foresaw no immediate revolution there. "For revolution we must wait for the first defeats,'" he said.

Pointing out such sacrifices as heavier taxation to be required of the people of the United States, Kaltenborn said, "We won't stop half way."

Investigation of textbooks suspected of having un-American passages and attempts to remove from ballots "representatives of groups advocating overthrow of the American form of government" were cited among chapter activities in the report from Mrs. Imogen B. Emery, chairman of the national defense through patriotic education committee, yesterday.

"As a committee we are definitely opposed to political world unions, to which we would sacrifice our whole system of government, which we have defended throughout our national existence," Mrs. Emery's report stated.

Conservation Is Urged

The United States Congress and the State legislatures were urged to recognize "the need for making adequate provision for the intelligent use and care of our natural resources as an integral part of the national defense program" in another resolution which pointed out that conservation of forests "should not be neglected in the stress of other more immediate measures for defense."

In another resolution, the society transferred $20,000 from its current fund to the pension fund. A pension and retirement plan for employes of the national society was established at yesterday's session.

Registration of D. A. R. representatives and visiting members was approximately 3,850, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Keyser Frey, chairman of credentials committee. That number included 2,133 voters.

Among national reports made yesterday, that from the student loan fund showed that 51 such funds were established as golden jubilee projects in the society's celebration of its fiftieth anniversary. "For eighteen years the educational program has expanded steadily; from a fund exceeding $422,000, over 5,000 students have received loans," according to the report from Mrs. Claudine Hutter, chairman.

Pelley to Appeal Court's Ruling On Extradition

William Dudley Pelley, head of the defunct, anti-Jewish Silver Shirts organization, served notice yesterday that he would appeal to the Supreme Court from the order that he be sent back to Asheville, N. C., for sentence on a six-year-old conviction of violating the Blue Sky laws there.

The United States Court of Appeals here approved Pelley's extradition Monday. District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Bernard Margolius, assistant, promptly moved to revoke Pelley's $5,000 bail.

Through Attorney T. Edward O'Connell, Pelley yesterday told the court that the Government's motion was "a murderous assault on American civil liberties and an attempt to institute totalitarian methods in the courts of the United States."

Pelley is in Washington and not in Noblesville, Ind., as was reported, attorneys said.

South's Mine Owners Ask Separate Talks

Southern coal operators informed United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis yesterday they would reopen negotiations for their own employes, but refused to reenter discussions at which Northern coal operators would be present.

The Southern operators, replying to a telegram from Lewis inviting them to resume joint wage conferences, proposed that Southern miners return to work immediately with an 11 per cent pay increase, leaving all matters open to negotiation.

In New York, meanwhile, the policy committee of the union voted not to send miners back to work until wage disputes with the Southern operators could be settled.

Lewis announced that he had replied to the Southern group that the union would resume negotiations with them but "without stipulations or without prior commitments."

Spokesmen for Southern operators said they would not "negotiate with our competitors," the Northern miners. The Southern coal operators suggested conferences should be held here. In his offer Lewis had invited the coal operators to meet in New York City tomorrow.

Lewis' proposal came as Northern operators of the eight-State Appalachian area and union negotiators in New York were formally ratifying a new two-year wage contract designed for the Nation's soft coal industry as a whole, and which Southern operators had previously announced was unsatisfactory to them.

At Steelman's Request

The proposal, Lewis said, was made at the request of the Federal Government through Dr. John R. Steelman, chief Federal consiliator, who for more than two weeks has tried to help labor and management break the industry's involved wage dispute.

Meanwhile, Lewis summoned to an afternoon meeting the union's policy committee to receive and either approve or reject the wage contract negotiated yesterday which, it was unofficially reported, provided for a $1-a-day increase in Northern Appalachian mines and $1.40 a day increase in Southern bituminous fields—thus stipulating a basic $7-a-day wage throughout the area.

The Southern operators previously had urged that the dispute, which has kept most of the Nation's mines—and 400,000 miners—idle since April 1, be put before the National Defense Mediation Board and had said they would take no further part in the Appalachian wage conference.

Two More Defense Strikes Put Up to Mediation Board

The Labor Department yesterday certified to the National Defense Mediation Board two more strikes, the first involving 1,209 workers at the Birdsboro Steel Foundry and Machine Co., Birdsboro, Pa., and the second affecting 210 employes of the Arcadia Knitting Mills, Inc., Allentown, Pa.

The Birdsboro plant, with $800,000 of Army ordnance and Navy contracts, has been idle since Wednesday when C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee members, disputing with an independent union, struck for union recognition. Rumors of a back-to-work movement and fear of consequent violence precipitated the certification.

The knitting mill strike began April 3, when the C. I. O. Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Printers and Bleachers struck for a closed shop, vacations, seniority rights, arbitration, wages and improved working conditions. The Arcadia mill holds an Army contract for 600,000 yards of mosquito netting.

The board also announced yesterday that panels of its members have been named to meet at 2 p. m. tomorrow with disputants in the threatened Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Co. strike and with participants in the Phelps-Dodge Products Co. strike at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Another board panel will seek to settle the San Francisco metal trades strike at 11 a. m. Tuesday, it was announced.

Alaska Bound, She Pledges Not to Wed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

KATHERINE MAURER, attractive Red Cross stenographer in San Francisco, has been appointed to a post at Fort Richardson, Anchorage, Alaska, after making an "informal pledge" she would not get married for at least two years. Steel Leaders Coming Here to Ask Price Rise

By the Associated Press

New York, April 17.—Washington can look forward to a pilgrimage next week of steel men anxious to show that their products should bring higher prices, authoritative sources here intimated today.

Long conferences now are in progress between enonomists and production men of the steel manufacturers, directed toward determining exactly what effect the industry's new 10 cents an hour wage increases will have on finished products.

This activity follows the "freezing" at present prices of steel products by Leon Henderson, Government price administrator, who announced he intended to forestall needless rises in costs with their attendant price inflations.

The stock market reacted immediately to Henderson's pronouncement with declines of a few cents to more than $1 each among the steel companies' common stock shares.

Steel men said the heavy cost imposed upon them by the new wage scales would make it necessary, for profitable operations, to raise the prices of some of their products, notably tin plate and sheets.

Some said the Government admittedly would require a period of study before being able to assign equitable price levels.

To assist the Government's Office of Production Management in this study, an iron and steel industry defense committee, headed by B. F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation, was formed today at the request of the OPM.

On the committee are 30 chief executives of representative companies producing various kinds of rolled and finished steel products. Their executive subcommittee consists of Fairless, T. M. Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel Corporation; E. G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Co.; E. L. Ryerson, chairman of Inland Steel Co., and E. T. Weir, chairman of National Steel Corporation.

In Washington, steel industry leaders were reported to be considering a test of President Roosevelt's price-control authority because of the order freezing steel and iron prices.

House Group Votes Strike Cooling-Off Bill

Green of the American Federation of Lebor appealed to all A. F. of L. unions to refrain from strikes during the defense emergency.

Disavowing recent strikes of "the rebel, rival, dual movement" and "the Communist influence which inspired many of them," Green told the unions:

"Employers must . . . grant increases in wages corresponding with the cost of living and the increased earnings of coroporations, but this form of economic justice should be realized without resort to strikes."

In addition to providing penalties for violation of the compulsory "cooling off" period—penalties that might conceivably be imposed on every member of a union that violated the law,the bill would require preservation of the status quo in respect to open or closed shops in defense plants.

That is, its penalties ($5,000 fine and a year's imprisonment) would take effect if an employer made a closed shop agreement where one did not exist prior to enactment of the bill.

Furthermore, the measure would require immediate dismissal from a defense industry of any employe whose employer "has reasonable cause to believe" is or ever was a Communist or Nazi.

As amended in committee, this section of the bill would require the United States Treasury to give back pay to an employe whom the National Mediation Board found was wrongfully dismissed. Under another amendments, all defense employes would be forced to swear that they are not Communists or Nazis, and do not believe in the overthrow of the Government by force.

The mediation section of the bill provides a three-step system of settling strikes. First, by conferences between the parties; then, at the request of either side, by referring the dispute to the Department of Labor's Conciliation Service, and then, after it has been with the Conciliation Service five days, by allowing either party to bring it before the National Mediation Board, which must publicize its findings if the strike has not been settled within 20 additional days.

While the dispute is being considered by Conciliation Service or Mediation Board, strikes or lockouts would be prohibited.

The bill's provision for the freezing of existing open and closed shops was attacked yesterday in the committee session by Representative Magnuson (Democrat), of Washington, as a future cause of "chaos and strikes."

Magnuson's effort to delete the entire provision was defeated, 11 to 8; and a subsequent attempt of Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, to modify it was beaten down, 10 to 9.

The anti-Communist provision was also debated at length before it was finally approved after some revision.

James Roosevelt Flies on First Leg Of Trip to Orient

Los Angeles, April 17 (AP).—James Roosevelt, his bride and two members of her family flew to San Francisco today, the first leg—for the President's son, at least—of a possible trip to the Orient.

Roosevelt, a captain in the Marines, and his former nurse, Romelle Schneider, whom he married Monday, drove here from their honeymoon in Palm Springs. They were joined in the flight to San Francisco by the bride's sister and mother.

Roosevelt, who has been stationed at San Diego, declined to comment on reports he had booked passage for two on the Pan American Clipper leaving San Francisco for Hongkong Saturday.

Bomb Just Misses U. S. Envoy, Wife

London, April 17 (AP).—At the height of last night's German air raid, United States Ambassador John G. Winant and his wife went to the embassy roof to watch.

They had one narrow escape when a high explosive fell nearby, and Mrs. Winant, who said she had been practicing falls, had a chance to put the theory to a practical test. Speaking for both of them, Winant said, "we know now what 'London can take it' really means."

Safe Crackers Get $251; Home Yields Loot Worth $300

Yeggmen escaped with $251 from the Phillip's Harware Co., 2414 Eighteenth Street Northwest, early yesterday after cracking a safe. More than $300 worth of property was taken from a private home by burglars.

The safe robbery was discovered by Norman Woodruff, Arlington, Va., manager of the hardware store. He said the intruders sawed through iron bars on a rear window. A jeweled wrist watch also was taken from the safe, he said.

Detectives described the safe-cracking as a "punch" job and put it down as the work of experts.

Mrs. Alice Landgraf, 1376 Fort Stevens Drive Northwest, told police her home was entered and ransacked shortly after 11 a. m. yesterday, and that two rings, a watch and a .32-caliber pistol were stolen.

Blood Bank Drive Over the Top at $6,818

The Children's Hospital blood and serum bank campaign is over the top.

With proceeds of several benefits still in transit and a few remaining parties yet to be held, a check-up yesterday of funds already collected showed $6,818.55 in and ready to be put to work.

In the 1940 drive which, like this year's, reached its peak in February, receipts dribbled in through the spring, summer and fall months. The same probably will happen again this year, sending the total beyond the $7,000 mark.

Sponsored by the American Legion, WJSV, Washington Bridge League and The Washington Post, the 1941 campaign surpassed its two predecessors in the variety of its supporters.

Legion posts and auxiliary units, college sororities, church groups of many denominations, boys' clubs, fraternal organizations, sports enterprises, theaters, luncheon clubs, housing communities — these are among the types of activities that joined in the 1941 blood bank campaign.

Individuals, as well as groups, did their part in the drive to perpetuate Children's Hospital life-saving, health-building "bank."

Falling in an in-between category were the ladies' committee composed of Washington and suburban women prominent in social and civic life who prefer to remain anonymous, and the citizens of nearby Virginia whose benefit parties were under the general supervision of Mrs. Robert N. Landreth.

The 72 donations routed through the ladies' committee amounted to $782. The Landreth parties produced $182 for the fund.

American Legion groups alone received $2,901.73 of the total. Largest single contribution in the drive's three-year history was that of the Government Printing Office Post—$931.41. The sum represented the receipts of three "movie nights," in which James Reese Europe Post cooperated with the G. P. O. group.

Other major benefits included the Interfraternal Bowling Tournament, $568.50; boxing and wrestling matches at Turner's Arena, $464; Washington Bridge League tournament, $299; Colonial Village party, $137.50; Jewish War Veterans Ladies' Auxiliary, $102.

Probably the greatest American Legion rivalry was between the Potomac Electric Power Co. and Washington Gas Light Co. posts, the latter gaining the edge, $301.79 to $282.70.

First contribution of the 1941 campaign was a check for $100 from the Bureau of Engraving Post, American Legion.

The benefit party given by George E. Killeen Post and its auxiliary unit, which raised $109.60, was in memory of James Morris, commander, who was fatally stricken while organizing the 1940 party.

Incidentally, a small balance still remains from last year's fund, thus making it certain—barring an epidemic or other emergency—that receipts of the 1941 campaign will carry the blood and serum bank well into 1942.

The money will be used to pay salaries of a surgical nurse and technician, who devote their full time to the "bank," and purchase special types of blood and serum, vaccines and certain drugs, as well as necessary supplies.

Children's Hospital has informed other voluntary hospitals in the District that its blood bank facilities are available on a community-wide basis. Patients unable to pay for blood receive it free.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

MADRILLON AT MID-DAY is a-teem with colorful customers and melody. We saw Vince Callahan who's back in town to help Uncle Sam sell Government bonds via the air waves . . . D. A. R. leddies were all over the place and looking no end splendificent with lovely corsages and bright badges . . . At his usual table on the sidelines was Arthur B. Hays, jr., who hasn't missed lunching at the Madrillon for ten years . . . Music is by symphony violinist Harry Cherkassky and pianist Sasha Bartnowsky, who transfer their talents to La Salle Versailles for evening interludes . . . Host Peter Borras says the reaction to his new house organ, The Gourmet, was very gratifying and the next issue will be out in a few days.

The King Cole Trio, one of the country's most gifted groups of sepia music makers, will open in Paul Young's next Tuesday evening. In the meantime, never miss Eddie White, most chuckle provoking emcee ever to prance in a Washington night spot.

DUCKS AND SWOOSES. The Mayflower Hotel sends us a plaintive note saying it's no use for you all to keep on asking for those yellow ducklings that splash in the Easter village pond at the Lounge entrance. When the village is dismantled all of the ducklings will get into their station wagon and ride home to the farm . . . Byron Henry drops his guitar to enact the title role of "Alexander is a Swoose" in Jack Coffey's show in the Metronome Room. He wears a droopy goose bill and is the most forlorn of swooses. Or should we say sweese?

There's a ferocious Donald Duck at the Casino Royal this week. He pops out of cyclist Gleeko's trousers at the last turn, all enraged at being a stooge and take a couple of earnest bites at Gleeko. Also he takes Gleeko's bows, quacks appreciation of applause.

GOING WEST are the Neptune Room's Dalton Boys when they complete their Washington engagement on April 26. Their destination will be the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago, where they'll divide the summer between singing and sun tanning themselves on the lake shore.

Chief peril of Jack Spot's daredevil unicycle act at the Shoreham lies in dropping some of the suds from the huge schooner of beer he carries. That rich foam is really whipped cream and a splash of it on the floor might skid the unicycle ker-flop.

SETTING UP EXERCISES are being done twice a day in the Lotus by the lissom Laska Sisters who give a brisk impression of waking up at dawn and leaping into a series of beautifying contortions. It's verra cute and diverting, but we can't recommend imitation of the Laska lasses' gymnastics to other girls—unless you want to take a chance on chassis strain.

FRESH BARGAINS. The benevolent management of the new Plymouth is serving every drink on their list for 25 cents between 8 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. . . . And you can get any of the tasty Silver Fox cocktails for 25 cents between 5 and 9.

LUCILLE LINCOLN, highly talented handwriting expert of the Anchor Room

HI HAT PROSPECTS. "Sandy" Ross is perfecting an impressive piano arrangement of "In a Persian Market." Hearing it in rehearsal, we'd say he's perfected it already. "Sandy" and Carmela Lazari also have been working on a soprano and violin version of "Intermezzo," should be doing it by the time this is printed . . . There's an apparently well-based rumor that the engagement of Jimmy Summerville and his Four M's will be extended.

NEW GLEN ECHO BANDSMEN. Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band is practically the same as last year. But there are four new members—Bassist Joe Forti, Saxists John Zurro and Bill Alden and Jesse Latto, who doubles on drums and vibes.

CAVALLARO CHALLENGERS. A fivesome from Carmen Cavallaro's Cosmos Room Orchestra have been playing golf out on the Rock Creek course ever since the first crocus pepped out. They're in their swing now and hereby challenge other golfing orchestreers to wage a tournament . . . Something tells us that the rhythm boys of the Rainbow Room, who've been golfing all winter excent when it snowed, are going to pick this one up . . . And while Manager Don Stone, of the Lounge Riviera, isn't a musician, he should be in on any nitery golf matches. He plays a wicked game, practices putting in his apartment on those days when weather prevents his getting on the links.

'Member Rosita Rios, the Mexicutie who preceded prima donna Marjorie Gainsworth at the Troika? Rosita will be married soon to that handsome young Greek who commuted by air between New York and Washington while she was here.

HOUSING TROUBLE beset Mayfair's Gentlemen of Rhythm when they landed in our town last week. They motored madly from College Park to Alexandria seeking a place to park their luggage, turned up in Mayfair plumb tuckered out for their afternoon cocktail session, only got their "second wind" when they were showered with request numbers. They've found a big and homey furnished house in the suburbs, are mightily pleased with it . . . Maestro Don Carper, of the Cafe Caprice, solved his housing problem in similar fashion when he had to give up his hotel quarters some time ago and discovered a swanky furnished home in Wesley Heights.

'GALE VISITORS. Fred Lowry, whistling lad of Horace Heidt's Band, visited the Nightingale recently to enjoy Rodd Raffell's rhythms. Members of Carmen Cavallaro's Band in the Cosmos Room, also drop into the Nightingale frequently for a spot of its streamlined dance music.

MIDNIGHT OPERETTAS. There's a classic quality to the violin solos of Bert Bernath and the vocals of Russ Cullen in the Pall Mall Room. Don't be afraid to ask for your favorite operatic numbers. Maestro Bernath knows them all . . . Tabloid comic operettas lend gayety to the midnight scene at Ciro's Famous Village. They're done by "Mayor" Ciro, Cecilia and Albert . . . Taylor and Taylor, new diversionists at Restaurant "823," have no end of light operatic numbers at their finger tips and on their vocal chords, present them with much flash . . . girl singers who'd like to see an example of perfectionism in modern vocal technic, should visit the King Cole Room when Eve Knight is singing "High On a Windy Hill."

Nell Deacon, new singing mistress of ceremonies at Kavakos' Grill, is of Syrian birth. Which explains her gorgeous black eyes and clear-cut features.

Contract Bridge

You can feel pretty smart if you pick the killing lead on each of today's two problems.

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♡ 10 9 4
◇ 10 8 7 5 2
♣ 6 4 2

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

2. Sitting East, you hold these cards:

♠ 7 4 2
♡ A 7 6
◇ 8 5 4
♣ 9 8 7 3

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	3 ♡
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

What card do you lead?

Suggested Solutions

1. There is no sense of leading your fourth-best diamond, as your chances of setting up any tricks seem hopeless. You should therefore try to develop tricks in partner's hand. It is usually wise to open an unbid major suit against no-trump contracts when no other lead is indicated, and in this case your best opening would appear to be the ten of hearts.

2. Partner wouldn't have doubled unless he thought an abnormal lead was needed to defeat the contract; so you should not make the normal opening lead of a heart. Since you have four clubs and the dummy bid clubs, partner is probably void in this suit. The club nine should be opened.

Naval Patrol Reports Serve To Aid Britain

United States neutrality patrol vessels are radioing reports of what they see in the Atlantic back to shore stations in "plain English," the White House disclosed yesterday.

This practice, making it easier for British naval vessels to find out what, if any, enemy ships might be moving through the neutrality patrol zone, was revealed simultaneously with a strong White House denial of reports that United States Coast Guard and naval vessels are convoying British merchant ships part way across the Atlantic.

Stephen T. Early, the President's press secretary, said that Mr. Roosevelt had authorized the following comment on the published convoy reports:

"The author of the story had very cleverly woven the long-time historic policy of the United States into a story which is a deliberate lie."

Navy Secretary Knox had said earlier that the convoy reports "did not contain a syllable of truth."

Asked what "historic policy" the President referred to, Early said the historic policy of United States protection for its ships on the high seas.

That policy led to creation of the United States Navy Department, Early said, and he added that the Navy's main purpose was to protect United States shipping.

Asked directly what the neutrality patrol was doing, Early said it was fulfilling its announced purpose of keeping war away from America's "front door."

R.A.F. Again Blasts French Seaports, Nazi Airdromes

By the Associated Press

London, April 17—The Royal Air Force, which raided Bremen and other German shipping and industrial centers last night, was believed to have made another heavy attack on the French channel coast this afternoon.

Explosions of big bombs vibrated across the misty coast of Dover, shaking buildings on the waterfront during the third attack on the coast in less than 24 hours.

Observers believed Nazi airdromes were being pounded, to make attack on Britain more difficult.

"It was not a night when results of the bombing could be observed in detail," the account said, "but our pilots were able to get some idea of the damage they were doing by watching burning patches of suffused red in the dark veil which covered the city.

"Steadily and methodically they started fires, bombed them, and saw that they were stretching outward before they turned for home."

The air ministry said the raids also extended to Cuxhaven, Wilhelmshaven and Wesrmunde, in addition to a daylight attack on the Island of Helgoland.

Auto Output To Be Cut 20% Knudsen Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Defense Chief William S. Knudsen late yesterday announced a 20 per cent reduction in the number of next year's automobiles and thus brought home the defense program's impact on the average family.

Knudsen said he had just completed conferences with "leaders of the entire industry" who "willingly accepted" the proposed cut in production, which he estimated would reduce the number of motor vehicles in the model year beginning next August 1 by 1,000,000 units.

A clear hint that the 20 per cent curtailment might be succeeded by further cuts was seen in Knudsen's statement that the industry agreed to an "initial" reduction of one-fifth of next year's output.

Knudsen's full statement:

"I have just concluded a meeting with the leaders of the entire automobile and truck producing industry, which I called to consider the growing defense production job that faces us.

"The entire industry willingly accepted an initial 20 per cent reduction in the production of motor vehicles for the model year beginning August 1 this year, in order to make available more man power, materials, facilities and management for the defense load now being made ready.

"The reduction will amount to approximately 1,000,000 units."

The importance of the proposed cut in releasing "materials, facilities and management" for defense purposes was seen in figures showing that the auto industry is the largest single customer for steel, strip steel, iron bars, steel sheets, malleable iron, alloy steel, gasoline, rubber, plate glass, nickel, lead and upholstery leather.

Announcement of the curtailment agreement immediately provoked forecasts that speedy action would be necessary to keep auto prices from skyrocketing during the scarcity period. Confirmation of impending price control steps was seen not only in the clear indication of future policy given Wednesday when the new Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply froze steel prices, but also from defense officials, who admitted that price discussions with the industry appeared to be in order.

It was believed that the problem of curbing price rises for motor vehicles was by no means as simple as for steel, largely because of the varying cost factors, which change year by year, going into the ultimate price of an auto, and also the difficulty of enforcing price orders on second-hand cars.

Compliance efforts among the thousands of small used-car dealers, whose products will probably be first to feel the price effect of the 20 per cent curtailment policy, may lead the OPACS into the same difficulties experienced by the NRA in seeking to enforce price orders on small retailers during 1934 and 1935, it was predicted.

Observers also speculated last night on whether the "defense load now being made ready" would lead to curtailment of other varieties of consumers goods — refrigerators, utensils, household and office equipment—using defense materials in their production.

The release of vital defense materials to be made possible by the curtailment, beginning next fall, is indicated in data showing the per cent of total production of the following commodities consumed by the auto industry.

Strip steel, 49 per cent; iron bars, 33; sheets, 44; malleable iron, 51; alloy steel, 55; steel (all forms), 18; gasoline, 90; rubber, 80; plate glass, 75; nickel, 23; lead, 34; zinc, 12; cotton, 10; glycerin, 12; upholstery leather, 68; aluminum, 9.7; copper, 13.7; tin, 11.

Expanded National Defense Production Seen

New York, April 17 (AP).—Nearly 17,000 manufacturers have reported, in a survey completed today, that they are prepared to expand the Nation's defense production by several billion dollars annually over anything previously predicted.

The survey, made by the National Industrial Council of the National Association of Manufacturers, shows that the Nation's factories have ready for this expansion the machinery and the floor space; that they will need thousands of new employes; that they are seeking—and getting—Government orders with which to put their facilities to complete use.

Further they are expected to employ mass productive methods through a revolutionary plan of communal pooling, already embracing 184 communities and predicted for operation in more than 1,000 communities within the year.

These facts, still in process of detailed compilation, will be presented next week to William S. Knudsen, head of the Office of Production Management.

'Cheers for Miss Bishop' Inspires Them for Star

Martha Scott Contributes Sterling Portrayal To Feminine Counterpart of 'Mr. Chips;' Stellar Acts Comprise Capitol Stage Revue

AT LONG LAST, the life story of the heroic Ella Bishop yesterday reached the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. It was many weeks ago that this subject was previewed one early morning in the Circle Theater, but, as was prophesied then, no matter how long the delay, "Cheers for Miss Bishop" is the sort of picture that is worth waiting for.

BELL

It is inevitable, since it spans a comparable number of years and concerns itself exclusively with scholastic life, that "Cheers for Miss Bishop" should be compared with "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." While it translates its major interest from masculine to feminine terms, this latest examination of collegiate life must be looked upon as a distaff "Mr. Chips" not unworthy of the same brackets. In breadth and depth it is not quite up to its predecessor. It is more restricted in scene and action than the Academy Award winner that found time and opportunity to explore the Alps and give its characters a little broader horizon than those in "Miss Bishop" find before them. But, in the main, they are easily and justly comparable.

If "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" established Robert Donat as a young actor completely competent to encompass the passing of 60-odd years, "Cheers for Miss Bishop" certainly can do no less for the youthful Martha Scott, who stamps herself as one of the cinema's most able young actresses by the perfection of her portrayal of the title role. There are a great many others of note who contribute generously to the deep human appeal of this placid, but still moving, picturization of a widely read novel, but "Cheers for Miss Bishop" is unequivocably and indisputably Martha Scott's picture.

A Simple Story of Feminine Fortitude

The story is not difficult to define. It is merely the history of an enthusiastic young woman, whose life was wrapped up in her undergraduate days at Midwestern College; who became a teacher there and through the span of her life inspired many of her early charges to fine attainment while she, herself, saw her every romance crumble, her dreams of home and family dissipated by circumstances she could not control. Through it all she remained a woman of Spartan spirit, finally honored by a banquet that compensated her only partially for all she had sacrificed for others all her life. It is a simple tale. But it also is one of infinite appeal to the heart and those finer impulses that occasionally find their way into expression in this day when "heart" seems to be the least of the world's anxieties. Here, in short, is a homely fable of a homely and humble woman so richly embellished with the qualities of gentleness, kindliness and unquenchable humor that it takes on classic contours and all the majesty of the commonplace.

A Cast of Exceptional Merit

The power of "Cheers for Miss Bishop" lies more in the manner of its playing than in the intrinsic strength of a fiction that dedicates itself to the glorification of American womanhood. Martha Scott's interpretation of the title role is superlatively fine. She manages the passage of time and the encroachment of the years with a degree of conviction that Mr. Donat's "Chips" in no way surpassed. As we have said, Miss Scott holds full title to "Miss Bishop." But there are others in the cast who accompany her splendidly down the years. William Gargan, who acquitted himself so well in "They Knew What They Wanted," with Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton, far excels that performance here. He quite obviously is endowed with talents not heretofore suspected. He is as compelling—like Miss Scott—at 70 as he is at 20. The same is true of Rosemary Decamp and Knox Manning, who give extraordinarily finely drawn characterizations of two foreign-born, who come to their full heritage under the sympathetic tutelage of Miss Bishop. Edmund Gwenn, that admirable British actor, is another who shines brightly in a luminous cast, as the president of Midwestern. Dorothy Peterson, Sidney Blackmer, Donald Douglas, Marsha Hunt, Jack Mulhall, William Blakewell and the veteran William Farnum are among still others who lend ripe abilities to the rounded excellence of one of the year's most impressive releases. And there is a youngster in there who will capture any discriminating eye. She is Mary Anderson, cast in the role of the disrupting little Amy Saunders, who so systematically wrecks Ella Bishop's life. Miss Anderson has had "bits" in other pictures—"Gone With the Wind," for one—but is an established actress now.

Stage Bill Hits High Speed

The "Festival" revue on the Capitol stage this week is a closely knit and enjoyable part of the new program, too. It introduces top-hole specialists in George Church, a dancer of unique capabilities; Sara Ann McCabe, a songstress with high notes that soar 'way up there; Gower and Jeanne, two ne plus ultra dancers, and Al Bernie, an impersonator who cuts a couple of slices above the others of his craft. And, of course, the Rhythm Rockets.

Sam Jack Kaufman's overture, Art Brown's singing bee and the Fox Movietone News complete a bill that will have the green light throughout the week.

Why New Orleans Was Aflame!

"The Lady Eve," at the Palace, Is Gay, Ribald Rib-Tickler

"THE LADY EVE." Paramount picturization of a story by Preston Sturges starring Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, with Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Melville Cooper, Martha O'Driscoll, Janet Beecher, Robert Greig, Dora Clement and Luis Alberni. Directed by Mr. Sturges. Previewed Tuesday, April 8. At the Palace Theater.

Strangle your wife, poison your grandmother, burn the old homestead, but first take time out for "The Lady Eve" at the Palace.

For this Preston Sturges comedy is one of the pictures of the year, clinches that author-director's unuttered claim to one of the truly refreshing talents of Hollywood and is just about the first film to come along in moons which deserves the superlatives that sneak into reviews.

Try to catch "The Lady Eve" from the beginning, unless you want to get as hopelessly snarled as Henry Fonda, playing the rich young explorer who hasn't seen a woman in two years.

First woman he does see, as he clambers up the rope ladder of a New York-bound ship after an Amazon expedition, is Barbara Stanwyck, who drops some pottery on him. In the ship's salon everyone makes a play for the heir to Pike's Ale ("The Ale That Won for Yale"), but again it takes Barbara to trip him up.

Sturges, Take A Bow!

Barbara is the facile front for card-sharp Charles Coburn. Their plan is to clip some of the Pike fortune, but Barbara falls for the clumsy fellow who was to be their victim. It looks like true romance, 'til Hank learns their real intent and gives her the brush-off.

Where Sturges has made this different, though, is that the gal crook doesn't let it go at that. When she and Coburn meet another crooked crony, Eric Blore, now masking under the splended name of Sir Alfred McGlennan Keith, she gets him to introduce her as his niece. The Lady Eve Sidwich, to his rotten rich neighbors, the Pike people. There she captivates poor Hank all over again and he thinks she's really someone else. So they get married and in their train drawing-room she tells him all about her past lovers. He gets off at the first whistle stop.

If you think you're going to hear anymore of this wondrous saga, you're crazy, for one of the most relished Sturges qualities is his unexpectedness. It does go on, but you'll thank us for not mentioning how.

It's impossible to avoid saying that "The Lady Eve" has the Sturges touch. Like the unmistakable Lubitsch, DeMille or Pasternak "touches," Sturges' is unique. He picks out the ordinary things of everyday life and points up their ridiculous characteristics. His camera constantly searches out the daffy details that make life such a mad non sequitur.

Gilt-Edged Comedy Cast

There's the solemnity surrounding Pike's Ale. While Eve Sidwich is regaling a shocked bridegroom with details of her previous marriages, the soundtrack drones out the Pilgrim's Chorus from "Tannhauser." Telegram announcing the dinner party in honor of the lady who came over from England in a submarine is addressed to George Spelvin, that fictitious name of theater programs. There's a luxury-liner seduction scene that never for an instant abandons good taste, yet it's the funniest thing ever.

The cast is superb, as a glance at its names will evidence. Miss Stanwyck has never been so charming and witty and Fonda's facility for comedy is as refreshing as the film itself. Charles Coburn, as the likable card sharp; Eugene Pallette, as the sorely tried ale tycoon; Blore, as the shrewd imposter, and William Demarest, as the wise guy who looks after Hank, are all remarkably good.

But it's Sturges we have to thank for this elegant comedy, from the moment a snake slithers through the snappiest credit lines of the year to that side-splitting "confession" scene of a blushing bride.

"More Trifles of Importance" and "Respect the Law," a "Crime Reel," are the Palace shorts, but "The Lady Eve" is the real thing. It's a pleasure to recommend it.

Hedy Now Knitting With Noted Tutor

Hedy Lamarr has, at last, joined the group of stars who choose knitting as a pastime. She has started on her first piece of handiwork, an afghan. Verree Teasdale is her volunteer teacher and the phone between the two homes is kept busy with Miss Lamarr's requests for advice.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 17 (INS).—Those of us who were at the luncheon for Father Flanagan were enchanted with Kathryn Grayson's voice and personality, as we had been when we heard and saw her in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary." Arthur Freed is starring the golden-voiced Kathryn in Jerome Kern's "Very Warm for May," which M-G-M owns. There is no one better equipped to produce musicals than Arthur, who is a fine composer himself.

PARSONS

Off the record, I hear L. B. Mayer, who is a Jerome Kern fan, is interested in the idea of putting on a cavalcade of Jerome Kern music. M-G-M also owns "Show Boat" and "The Cat and the Fiddle," and all the best known songs.

Tay Garnett has himself a bank roll—and just as important—an idea for a series of three independent pictures he will produce and direct. The first, "Three Sheets in the Wind," according to Tay, goes into production August 1, and stars Brian Donlevy, who should be starred if public opinion means anything.

If Hal Roach doesn't get Babe Hardy and Stan Laurel and star them in a comedy, he is out of his mind. I never realized the popularity of these two comics until I went to Mexico City and saw the reception they received from all the fans. Hal is making streamlined features, sort of glorified shorts, with other players, and he ought to get Babe and Stan and get them quickly.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mary Martin confirms the report that she and Richard Halliday are expecting the stork. If its a girl, she will be named Mary Heller Halliday; Rudy Vallee goes into the hospital for a serious operation as soon as he finishes his Universal picture: Johnny Downs, who will wed June Draper the 28th of June, dancing every dance with her at Ciro's; Mischa Auer and Joyce Hunter holding a reunion there after his Mexican trip and dancing to Henry King's music.

Greta Garbo has rearranged all the furniture in Erich Remarque's residence to suit her taste.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

New York, April 17.

PARTY: Last Sunday, in Washington, Evalyn Walsh McLean held her annual luncheon party which usually is attended by a host of notables. Lucius Beebe, who had been invited, took the train to Washington, but could get no Pullman reservation. The conductor finally sold Beebe the only seat available in the smoking car. It was next to another McLean guest—John L. Lewis. Lucius returned to New York after the party—and went straight to Regent Hospital, for a head examination. . . . At the luncheon, Jerome Zerbe was introduced to John L. Lewis, jr., and asked: "You're at Princeton now, aren't you?" . . . "Yes," replied young Lewis. "Did you go there?" . . . "No, I went to Yale," Zerbe informed. "That was in the times when coal operators made enough money to send their sons to college."

LYONS

POLITICS: Marc Blitzstein, who won his second Guggenheim Fellowship last month, is writing another American opera, to be called "The Happy Family" . . . Decca made recordings of Blitzstein's most recent work, "No for An Answer," but refused to make the final pressings, when they listened to the chorus of his "Hymn of Hate." Because in that chorus, they heard the repeated phrase: "They have killed our Joe," the Decca officials concluded that the author meant Joe Stalin. . . . Blitzstein protested and reminded them that Joe Stalin still was alive. "Nevertheless, we want no part of that Red stuff," they ruled. "This isn't the Kremlin, you know" . . . And so Blitzstein had the pressings made behind the Kremlin walls of Camden—by the Radio Corporation of America.

ENTERPRISE: Selden Rodman, editor of Common Sense, is the author of "The Airmen," a narrative poem. One section of that poem concerns the Wright Brothers. Rodman therefore recorded that section and sent it to Orville Wright . . . From the secretary of the first man to make a successful flight came this acknowledgment: "Mr. Wright thanks you for the record, but has not yet been able to play it—because he has taken his victrola apart, for experimental purposes."

SONG: On the steps of City Hall, when Lord Halifax presented medals to the widows of the victims of the World's Fair bombing, Major LaGuardia asked Gertrude Lawrence whether she'd sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" . . . "I should love to," said Miss Lawrence, "but I don't think my voice is big enough" . . . "Maybe so, lady," the mayor told her, "but you're big enough."

HOUSING: Stewart McDonald, the former Federal Housing Administrator, was confronted by a personal housing problem, but finally solved it. McDonald has reserved a suite of rooms in the new Statler Hotel in Washington, D. C. . . . To date, not only is the ground for this hotel still unbroken—but the edifice now on that site has not as yet been demolished.

CHATTER: Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes is in Washington's Emergency Hospital . . . William McC. Martin, the retired president of the New York Stock Exchange, recommended as his successor, Theodore S. Watson, of Watson & White. He's a New Deal, anti-Morgan millionaire . . . The record for per diem salaries in the production field will be set this week—when Michael Todd signs to do the Fair at Brockton, Mass. Todd will receive $10,000 for seven days' work . . . Ann Corio, the strip-teaser, will make her legit debut on Broadway in "White Cargo." Jules Leventhal will produce it at the Windsor Theater . . . Grover Cleveland Alexander, the veteran baseball pitcher who has been working at the Flea Circus, will be signed to coach Tommy Dorsey's softball team.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 17.

I wonder what thousands of our young men who have given up good jobs to work for Uncle Sam at $21 a month think when they read daily of their fellow citizens holding up defense industries for higher wages and shorter hours.

HOPPER

Every camp in this country is lacking in supplies of all kinds, due to an output constantly slowed up by striking labor, and the very laborers who are idling are the men who have been excused from the draft because of their importance to defense output. In case of war, our 70-cents-a-day boys would have to face the enemy without adequate arms, ammunition, or equipment, because their fancy brothers who are making $8 a day, and time and a half for overtime, are too busy upping their wages to get down to honest work.

Sam Goldwyn's at it again, bringing five people from Broadway. He was able to get little 20-year-old Theresa Wright from "Life With Father," and her New York manager, Oscar Serlin, even directed the test that got her a Goldwyn contract. She'll play Bette Davis' daughter in "The Little Foxes." The two older brothers, the scalliwag son, and the colored man are all from the original cast of "The Little Foxes."

Now that Gloria Swanson has been signed. RKO is whipping up a luncheon or dinner to reintroduce her to the press and meet her old pals—and has she got 'em! With Gloria all set, what about Eleanor Boardman, who looks better than ever?

The reason Madeleine Carroll got the part in "Dildo Cay" was that Dottie Lamour is too busy to do it . . .

That trek to Mexico City took Pat Morison off suspension at Paramount, 'cause the President of Mexico asked for her. Her brother, who's now singing at the Scheherazade, started his career in Mexico City.

Budd Schulberg's first novel—"What Makes Sammy Run?"—is a terrific piece of reading. Budd will finish the novel started by the late F. Scott Fitzgerald. Incidentally, Schulberg's cousin, Henry Rogers, is one of our top publicists, but Buddy didn't hire him when he wanted praise.

Army to Train 10,000 in '42 As Officers

The Army announced yesterday that 10,000 or more selectees or other soldiers will be trained as officers next year—a five-fold increase over original plans.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, said that "demonstrated leadership ability" will control the selection of enlisted men for the officer candidate schools, rather than their education. To obtain the best troop leaders, he said, no specific educational requirements for commissions are being prescribed for the present.

Ten schools with an enrollment of 2,300 men will open early in July for three-month courses leading to commissions as reserve second lieutenants. Original plans called for but four schools with a total enrollment of 500. New and larger groups will enter the schools in October, January and April.

"These men ought to make the finest group of officers obtainable," Marshall commented.

The new schools, number of students and opening dates:

Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga., 600 students, July 5.

Field Artillery, Fort Sill, Okla., 250, July 8.

Coast Artillery, Fort Monroe, Va., 200, July 5.

Cavalry, Fort Riley, Kans., 100, July 1.

Engineers, Fort Belvoir, Va., 100, July 7.

Signal Corps, Fort Monmouth, N. J., July 1.

Ordnance, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 50, July 8.

Quartermaster, Camp Lee, Va., 150, July 7.

Medical, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., 100, July 1.

Armored Force, Fort Knox, Ky., 250, July 1.

At the same time, Marshall reported the Army had reached the strength of approximately 1,210,600 officers and men, of whom 68,000 were officers, 473,000 Regular Army enlisted men, 267,000 enlisted National Guardsmen and 402,000 Selective Service trainees.

Aluminum Corp. Seeks to Buy Metal Owned by France

New York, April 17 (AP).—The Aluminum Corporation of America is seeking to buy 5,900,000 pounds of Aluminum the French government bought for its aircraft and munitions plants before Germany conquered France.

The aluminum, needed in the American aircraft industry and in the shape of processed rods and sheets, is in storehouses in Manhattan and Detroit, as well as on the French Line pier here and in railroad cars at Staten Island.

It was learned that the Aluminum Corporation, immediately upon discovering the "forgotten" metal, made offers which were accepted by the Vichy government. But completion of the sale has been snagged by judgments obtained by various persons, corporations and the Canadian government, all declaring claims on properties of France.

Output to Top 'Any2 Nations,' Knudsen Says

William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, disclosed yesterday that the new Army tank arsenal near Detroit will begin operations Tuesday and be turning out 14 of the 27-ton "land forts" a day by October.

Outlining the progress of the defense program before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee, he declared that when the United States "gets going," our arms production will equal that of "any two other nations on earth."

Earlier, Secretary of the Navy Knox told the committee that the "over-all picture" as to the Navy is "one of reassurance and optimism," but said that threatened shortages in structural steel, aluminum, steel forgings and armorplate, may cause a holdup of production in the future.

Senator Wallgren (Democrat), of Washington, asked Knudsen if Germany was not gaining on the United States in the production of armaments.

"We haven't gotten started yet, answered Knudsen, with a grin, "so what do you mean by 'gaining'?"

He told the committee that the production of 13-ton tanks by the American Car & Foundry Co. was "going along well" and that 1,216 planes were produced in the United States during March—three times the output last June, he said.

Production of the 27-ton tanks at the Chrysler arsenal would be further along, the OPM chief said, except that lessons of the Battle of Flanders made the Army "start over" and build a medium tank with a lower turret, more armor and a 3-inch gun.

"You won't hear much about unemployment after next fall," he remarked.

Knox told the committee that the construction of new naval bases "has proceeded with rapidity."

"Sites which were without any improvements ten months ago are today operating air stations," he said. "The expansion program has pushed forward the line of defense in the Pacific by additional operating air bases which will be placed in commission between late summer and December."

Replying to criticism that the great bulk of Navy contracts has gone to "old line, established business companies," Knox declared:

"To a large extent this is true, and for good reason. If you want something in a hurry, you go to the man you know can make it quickly and right."

He said the Navy Department had received allocations from the President for ordering $128,963,000 in arms for transfer under the lend-lease program, and had pending pojects totaling $272,422,000. Furthermore, he said, issues to the British from naval arms stocks have been made "almost daily."

The Navy Secretary told the committee that while its investigation might reveal that "we have made mistakes of costs or methods," there is one mistake they won't make.

"That is we will not fail to have our two-ocean Navy ready at the earliest possible moment," he said. "That is the first and only military objective of the Navy program—and disregarding whatever errors of methods, details or cost that you may find, we are accomplishing that military objective.

"We cannot sit around and theorize on how to reform, when we need something of absolute necessity for military result."

G M Months Ahead On Machine Guns

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corporation, announced today that the corporation is "months ahead of schedule" in production of its $61,000,000 machine gun order.

A stock of completed guns is being built up, ready for the Army whenever needed, Wilson said.

U. S. to Enlist 500,000 Air Raid Spotters

By John G. Norris

The Army announced yesterday that a Nation-wide air-raid warning service, manned by 500,000 to 600,000 volunteer civilian observers, will be established immediately.

Officials said that a majority of the civilian "minute men" will be women and that they will be trained to act as spotters of enemy airplanes in time of war.

The warning system is a part of a new aerial defense plan being put into effect by the War Department after long study of the lessons of the war. Said to follow closely the British air defense program, it involves the cooperation of interceptor pursuit planes, antiaircraft batteries, balloon barrages, the Army Signal Corps and the civilian observers.

"This move to systematize the air warning defenses of the Nation," the War Department stated, "is another step in real preparedness for a possible emergency. It is being taken now in recognition of the fact that the active cooperation and collaboration of the general public are essential in the air phases of defense."

Organization of the volunteer observers corps will begin at once under the direction of Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the General Headquarters Air Force, whose headquarters is at Bolling Field. The War Department said that it expected that the 500,000 to 600,000 members will be enrolled by the end of August "for active participation in air defense."

Details of the program, including information as to how to enroll in the civilian force, will be announced today. An intensive recruiting campaign will be started Sunday, when the Army will stage a dramatized demonstration of the warning system in New York City.

Civilian spotters organized by the American Legion will take part in a mock air raid with Army planes and antiaircraft guns. The show will be broadcast over national hook-ups.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, also disclosed during the day that seven manuals dealing with measures to be taken by civilian governments in case of aerial attack will be published soon. They are entitled "Protective Construction," "Air Paid Warning," "Fire Protection," "Air Raid Protection," "Blackouts," "Industrial Camouflage" and "Gas Protection."

Two Ships Sail With Flour for France

Copyright by New York Times

With the sailing from New York yesterday of two ships with flour for unoccupied France, Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, called on Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, to renew his appeal for more shipments of wheat and other relief supplies to be sent on a regular schedule.

Officials indicated that the delivery of the two cargoes would be observed before anything more was attempted.

District Appeals Board Will Hear Smith Plea on Draft

Leonard A. Block, Government appeal agent for Selective Service Board 8, said last night he was "prepared" to carry to the District Appeals Board the disputed selection case of Ellison D. Smith, jr., son of the South Carolina Senator.

SMITH

Block made the statement after Col. Davis G. Arnold, chairman of Board No. 8, apparently irked by a bitter statement of Senator Smith Wednesday, challenged the legislator to show why his son merited other than a Class 1-D, temporary student's deferment.

Arnold also contradicted the Senator's assertion that he had not attempted to secure exemption or deferment for the registrant.

Senator Did Not Appear

Senator Smith did not himself appear at Board No. 8 headquarters, but contacted Appeal Agent Block after the 26-year-old son had been put in Class 1, the chairman said.

Furthermore, the chairman said, a man representing himself as Senator Smith telephoned him several days ago from Lynchburg, S. C., the Senator's home where he is at present, and "pleaded with me to defer his son as a necessary man."

"He went into a long harangue about what a 'wonderful boy' his son was and also asked me to suppress the letter of the 12 Senators." (Young Smith, seeking deferment because of his job as a clerk of the Agriculture and Forestry Committee produced a letter of recommendation signed by 12 members of that unit.)

"I think it's only fair to defend the members of the board against Smith's insinuations such as 'lending ourselves to a murderous assault.' As for myself I may have made mistakes in judgment in the past but never in integrity."

Meanwhile, Block reiterated previous assertions that young Smith's claim—that as a clerk of his father's Agriculture and Forestry he merited deferment as a man necessary to national defense—had "merit."

However, an appeal would not be in order, he said, before the Senator's son has had his physical examination. He is now tentatively in Class 1-D, to be excused until July 1, if, as expected, he passes the medical test.

Once the much publicized registrant has definitely been called Class 1 material, Block would represent him before the appeals board, maintaining that Smith is, in fact, indispensable to national security in his committee capacity, the agent said.

It was he, Block said, who suggested writing of a letter, signed by 12 Senators, members of the Agriculture and Forestry Committee, certifying the potential trainee as indispensable to the committee.

Meanwhile, young Smith, asked if he would appeal the case, remarked:

"There's been so much shooting around my head, I just don't know what I'm going to do. Of course, they're just using me as a goat. But it doesn't make any difference any longer." He refused to amplify this statement.

The registrant does not necessarily initiate appeals in disputed draft cases. If the Government appeal agent is sufficiently convinced of the merits of a case, he may launch the plea. Hence Appeal Agent Block is in a position to do so.

Simultaneously, Washington Selective Service headquarters made public the names of 38 recruits to be inducted today (Friday) at Richmond, Va. They will go into service at Camp Lee, Va. The names follow:

Board No. 1

Joseph A. Kelly, Ladislaus J. Esunas, Jacob Pradin, Clarence W. Taft, Andor W. Cappel, John M. Baines, Theodore N. Gill 3d, Rubin Shulman, Ronald C. Barefoot, Clinton H. Watson.

Appeals Court Reverses Stand In NLRB Case

Philadelphia, April 17 (AP).—The United States Third Circuit Court of Appeals, reversing a previous stand, ruled in a 4-to-1 decision today that the National Labor Relations Board was empowered to watch over employe-employer relations although a collective bargaining contract had been signed.

Last February 3, the court, without dissent, found that it was not a function of the NLRB to "police relations" between employer and employe after a working agreement had been signed. Five days later, acting on its own volition, it ordered a rehearing.

Judge Albert W. Maris, who wrote the February ruling, also prepared today's majority opinion. He said "we have reached the conclusion that in our former opinion we placed too narrow a construction upon those provisions of the board's jurisdiction to deal with unfair labor practices."

Pole Doesn't Expect Big Victories Now

New York, April 17.—Warning that neither "great victories" nor an Allied offensive against Germany could be expected at the present, Gen. Wladislas Sikorski, premier of the Polish government-in-exile, predicted today ultimate success by the democracies through stronger morale and greater resources to carry on the war.

The premier, who also is commander in chief of the Polish forces serving with the Allies, saw Russia's policy under Josef Stalin as aimed towards prolonging the war, weakening both sides and then forcing its own peace terms.

Maj. William C. Bentley, jr., whose recall as assistant military attache at Rome was demanded by the Italian government, yesterday was assigned to duty at the American Legation at Lisbon.

Maj. Bentley was specifically commended for excellent services after the Italian government ordered him to leave in retaliation for the expulsion from Washington of an Italian naval attache who helped direct partial destruction of Italian merchant vessels lying in American harbors.

The Latest Addition to the Telephone Central Office Family

A NEW telephone central office—"OR dway"—has just been added to Washington's rapidly growing list of central offices. Located in the Woodley-Emerson building, it will take care of growth in the areas now being served by the Woodley and Emerson telephones.

Telephone service in Washington has grown by leaps and bounds. At the turn of the century, there were only 4,000 telephones in service. At the end of 1910 this number had increased to nearly 41,000, and five central offices were required to handle the calls.

By the end of 1920, this number had more than doubled. It nearly doubled again by 1930, when there were 168,000 telephones and 13 central offices in service.

Today, the District of Columbia with 285,000 telephones is served by twenty-two central offices. To refresh your memory, a list of these offices follows:

Preference For None

Senator Ellison D. Smith has blundered in making an issue of the deferred drafting of his son. Nor is his lack of judgment in raising the issue minimized by the hurling of ridiculous epithets at the local draft board which refused to give Ellison D. Smith, jr., special privileges. The Senator's charge that his son has been "pilloried" and that Draft Board No. 8 has lent itself to a "murderous assault" is too fantastic for serious consideration. The draft board granted young Mr. Smith deferment until after June so as to avoid an unreasonable break in his legal studies. It properly refused to grant a longer delay in his military training because it does not believe that his services as clerk to the Senate Agriculture Committee are "necessary to national defense." Exemption of a young man holding a position of this sort would be gross discrimination against the thousands in equally important jobs who must make personal sacrifices for defense of their country.

By ironic coincidence this row came to public attention on the very day that William McChesney Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, was being inducted for a year of military training. Mr. Martin has cheerfully accepted the duty imposed upon him by the Selective Service Act. It is of the utmost importance that young men from all walks of life should take a similar attitude. Even requests for special privileges for sons of officials ought to be avoided, for mere suspicion that favoritism is being shown might have a disturbing effect upon the morale of our citizen soldiers. For that reason complete publicity for deferments granted seems desirable. Publicity as to why some young men are taken and others left is scarcely less essential to building an army by the democratic process than scrupulous fairness in making the selections.

"Cooling-Off" Period

No entirely satisfactory piece of legislation dealing with strikes in defense industries has emerged to date. It is none the less important to continue Congressional studies designed to work out a formula for the prevention of unnecessary walkouts. The fact that such inquiries are going forward in Congress, with fewer excited speeches on the subject, is a happy augury for constructive legislation.

Some opponents of any legislative restraints upon the right to strike are urging Congress to drop the whole issue now that the outlook for peaceful adjustment of differences has improved. If Congress were thinking in terms of a drastic law abolishing the right to strike, this advice would be sound. Only under the gravest emergency could such an infringement upon individual rights be reasonably considered. But abolition of the right to strike has never been and is not now the real issue before Congress. Rather it is a question of strengthening the machinery of conciliation and putting employers and employes under obligation to use that machinery before resorting to coercion.

Obviously this is not an issue to be decided under the pressure of hysteria. Most of the bills designed to facilitate settlement of labor disputes provide for a "cooling-off" period in which employers and unions would talk over their differences and in many cases work out agreements. The success of the National Defense Mediation Board in settling strikes and the improved outlook for continuous operation of defense plants give Congress a "cooling-off" period in which to abandon excited oratory and devise practicable legislation. Certainly it has a better opportunity to pass satisfactory legislation now than it would have later if a new wave of walkouts in defense industries should develop.

Officials point out that the Conciliation Service sometimes has no opportunity to assist employers and employes in settling a dispute until after a strike has been called. More positive requirements for direct negotiations before resorting to blows are certainly in order. Such requirements form the basis of the Vinson bill which Secretary Knox has approved in principle. Any bill of this character ought to be carefully scrutinized before enactment. But it is equally clear in this case that the scrutiny should take place now while the outlook for deliberation and restrained action is favorable.

Courage To Tax

Nobody with a knowledge of the immense resources of this country has ever seriously doubted our economic ability to carry the burdens of the defense program without undermining the Government's credit. But there have been well-founded fears that political opposition to new taxes would result in excessive reliance upon borrowing to cover deficits. Hence, the announcement that Congressional leaders of both parties are in accord with Secretary Morgenthau's proposal to raise an additional $3,500,000,000 in taxes next year provides welcome assurance that economic arguments have won a victory over political opportunism. It will take courage to collect that much more money from the American people. For the program will entail increased levies on articles of mass consumption and, no doubt, on small incomes. But if the people understand that increased taxation is the best possible insurance against rapidly rising prices, they will likewise understand that rigorous taxation is for their own best interests.

It cannot be said too often that we, as a nation, have to pay currently for the things we contribute to the country's defense. We have no choice in that respect. But we can choose between rigorous taxation which would apportion defense burdens among individuals by forcing them to contribute part of their income to the Government and an unsystematic financing plan which would compel the public to pay for defense by permitting inflationary price rises which automatically lower living standards. Even the prospect of additional taxes is good news when we are confronted by an alternative so dismaying.

Importance of Steel

Leon Henderson's order "freezing" steel prices at prevailing levels is a wise precautionary move designed to prevent a general advance of steel prices following wage increases that have added many millions of dollars to company pay rolls. It is not, however, definitive. Mr. Henderson has explained that the "freezing" order does not set a permanent limit to steel prices. It merely gives his office time to study the effect of the wage advances on production costs and to authorize such adjustments as seem justified.

Whether increases in prices of certain steel products are warranted, is, as Donald M. Nelson, director of OPM's purchasing division, well says, "a question of fact." But facts regarding the production costs of a great industry such as steel are hard to determine. They are far from easy to interpret in terms of prices of finished products. That is especially true under present conditions when rising rates of production cause per unit overhead costs to decline while wage outlays are rising. Moreover, with the steel industry running full blast to meet the heavy needs of the defense program, and to satisfy civilian demands, too, high-cost marginal plants and less efficient equipment are being pressed into service. The question arises, therefore, as to whether the prices required to cover the high costs of these marginal concerns shall be permitted to determine the general level of prices for steel products. Concerns above the margin of profitable production might be able to absorb wage increases that would put less efficient establishments out of the running. Mr. Henderson, out of his great experience with costs and prices, knows all this. He will seek to keep steel prices at minima consistent with fair treatment of the industry.

But steel is too important to be left untouched till the studies have been completed. As Mr. Henderson says, "steel is an element of cost in practically every item of the defense program" and directly or indirectly "in virtually every item of civilian consumption." Consequently, a rise in steel prices would be followed by advances in other basic commodities and it would be reflected eventually in rising prices of manufactured goods. "Presently," Mr. Henderson warns, "the ultimate consumer would find that he must pay more for what he buys, and so the foundation would have been laid for a dangerous upward spiral of prices in general—which would mean, briefly, boosting the cost of living." This official warning would, of course, carry more weight if it had been uttered before, instead of after, the steel workers had secured their wage increases. But at least it emphasizes the importance of holding wage increases within moderate limits, so that industry will not be compelled to boost prices of finished goods in order to cover its production costs and prevent profits from being turned into losses.

Doubtless the Office of Price Administration is in a position to perform a useful public service in preventing the steel industry as well as other defense industries from making wage increases an excuse for unjustified price increases. At the same time its effectiveness as a price-control agency is inevitably severely limited. Official price-fixing decrees alone cannot protect us from spiraling prices that spell inflation unless control is also established over production costs. And of these costs wages are the most important element. It is likewise necessary for those who direct our monetary and taxation policies to do their part to prevent prices and living costs from getting out of control. These considerations should be borne in mind lest the public expect wizardry to flow from Mr. Henderson's wand.

Britain's Loss

It is often said of a great man who dies in wartime that his loss is equal to that of an army corps. Such a tribute could be paid almost in literal truth to Lord Stamp, who was killed in Wednesday's air raid on London. For he was not one, but many. Among economists and statisticians he was outstanding. As a businessman he had few equals in the City of London, for he ran one of England's most important railroads. In the Court of the Bank of England no director was listened to with greater respect. He served on an endless number of boards, commissions, and committees, and was always at hand whenever the government required an expert delegate to an international conference. On Sundays, as likely as not, he could be found preaching from some Nonconformist pulpit. And he still found time to be the mayor of a township. Lord Stamp, indeed, could do a thousand things at one and the same time and do most of them so uncommonly well that he was looked upon as an authority upon them. Once he commented somewhat ruefully upon his versatility. "When I go to the Bank of England," he said, "they dismiss me as an academic economist. When I lecture to a group of economists, they simply say, 'Well, he is just a banker.'" This was just Lord Stamp's whimsicality. The fact was that no man in Britain held the respect of so many experts in so many different fields. His loss is a great one. Aside from the invaluable war work he was doing, here was one man who could have been trusted in any postwar settlement conference to be wise in big decisions. His humanity was as great as his intellect. For both reasons his passing will be mourned among a wide circle of friends and admirers on this side of the Atlantic.

Ring-Aroun'-A-Roseola

The President, it seems, has changed his mind about going to Warm Springs, Ga., this week. An epidemic of German measles is rife at the Warm Springs Foundation, and though Mr. Roosevelt, having once had this disease himself, is now presumably immune, he said he was reluctant to expose the newspaper correspondents to infection. There is something rather queer about this explanation. In the first place, the whole Eastern section of the country is now being invaded by German measles, and anybody who happens to be susceptible is not likely to escape them just by staying away from Warm Springs. Besides, as diseases go, the German measles is nothing to worry about. It is, on the whole, rather less serious and uncomfortable than a slight cold and requires nothing more in the way of treatment than 48 hours isolation and rest.

The curious and ironic thing is that this innocuous, indeed, almost benevolent, little malady (roseola epidemica) is called "German" to distinguish it from the regular measles (morbilli rubeola), which is a nasty and dangerous business sometimes leading to pneumonia or tuberculosis. And whereas the eruptions of the regular measles are rather ugly and cresent-shaped, the German measles are just a lot of tiny and pleasant looking pink polka dots.

Maybe this rather dainty appearance explains why they were called originally French measles. The name was changed to "German" when it became our habit to associate that word with such things as Dresden pottery, Christmas trees, waltzes, and Grimms' fairy tales. During the hysteria of the last World War they somehow escaped the nationalizing frenzy that made "liberty cabbage" of "sauerkraut" and something else out of frankfurters.

But maybe we'd better change the name right now while the matter is on our minds. A diagnosis of roseola, or pseudomeasles, is almost invariably greeted with relief by parents who have been fearful of the real thing. Thus to call them German is very bad psychologically, as Dr. Goebbels, if he were working for our side, would be sure to explain. It would be almost tantamount to a microorganic fifth column.

FUGITIVE

Run, lovely fugitive,
Who should have been a doe,
Afraid and streaking through
The silver snow.

Escape the foolish town
And all the snares of men
That your poor wounded eyes
May live again.

And when men drop the chase
I know where you will be;
But fear your own wild heart
Much more than me.

Our Future Course

Surely after this last week of news from the scene of conflict abroad, no true, freedom-loving American can honestly have any doubt in his mind as to our course in the future. For there is only one course which Americans can follow—the course which leads to the ultimate victory of the British people and assures a decent future to the Nazi-enslaved nations. The course of submission to Nazi domination could not be acceptable to a people of our heritage. There is no comfortable middle road.

For if Britain and her allies fall, solely because of our "too little and too late" aid, the blame for the fall of democracy and free democratic nations throughout the world could not help but fall on our shoulders. In the face of this tragedy, we would not remain the great Nation, founded on the brotherhood of man and freedom for all, which we have always so proudly considered ourselves to be.

Aluminum, Please!

The Government is in need of aluminum. Most housewives have one or more battered kitchen utensils of aluminum which they would hardly miss. So let the American Legion and V. F. W. announce a day for collecting this donated metal and comb the cities and countryside with trucks.

I firmly believe that in this way hundreds and hundreds of tons of utensils would be obtained by the OPM and parceled out in its best judgment.

Elements Of Time

After reading Carl Sandburg's frank and searching analysis of his drift from "isolation to all-out aid to Britain," featured in Sunday's Post, this writer wishes to call attention to the fact that this phenomenon, multiplied ten-thousand fold, will be the ultimate agency of God's justice in destroying Hitler's dominion of malignancy and evil.

With cold-blooded deliberation and foresight, Hitler set about translating the unbelievable formula of a mad man's dream contained in "Mein Kampf," into the delirium of insufferable horror which characterizes the world today. Like the insane genius he happens to be, he perfected his catastrophic formula down to the exact determination of its minutest and most insignificant variable, and then to insure absolutely the success of its fiendish purpose, introduced the all-powerful fourth dimension, hitherto ignored or botched by all previous schemers of history's villainy, the element of time. Whatever his inhuman formula lacked in the ponderables and imponderables of fate, Hitler knew that the element of time, cunningly manipulated and interpolated, would more than compensate for the slowly gestating forces of resistance and retribution with which the democratic concept of life habitually implemented its survival. He knew, and believed, that he who was master of time possessed an all-powerful lever, whose deft and purposeful finger touch might shift the very universe from the ordained orbit of God's will into that of consummate evil. With time he could destroy these blind, wishful thinking fools, even though God Himself appeared to lead them.

Time is still Hitler's strongest ally and democracy's deadliest enemy. Unless you wake up, America you will find that your stupidity has contributed to the destruction of the grandest dream of all the ages, Christ's dream of social justice for the brotherhood of man. Let us make time our ally and not wait, like Carl Sandburg, until what we must inevitably do, suffers the usurious and frustrating discount of suicidal procrastination.

"Double-Up" Rooms

In order to increase living accommodations in this city to meet the preparedness efforts, I suggest that people in their present quarters "double up," two or more going into one room, thereby making room for those seeking accommodations. There are many residents who can do that without too great discomfort. That could be considered their participation in the the preparedness effort. The owners could seek references, and the residents and roomers could consider that and act quickly and partriotically without any more ado, reporting rooms made available to the proper authority. Also the city could be canvassed and houses inspected in a search for rooms with suggestions to the owners. Many in this way could perform a part, when they otherwise might not have an opportunity. These arrangements would probably be temporary, as the Government is building new quarters as rapidly as practicable.

Referendum

About the referendum people are proposing: I listened to the People's Forum on Saturday, and it seemed to me, from the goings on, that if we had such a thing, we'd probably have a civil war on our hands on the issue of war or peace!

Excerpts Of A Letter From England

Time always did go by pretty quickly, but it seems to have beaten all records these past few weeks. The illusion is heightened by the constant reference in all the press to the impending second installment of the "blitz." The prophets are having a glorious time forecasting what is in store for us, but taking care to say that it might be this—or that—or both together—or even neither. My own guess, for what it's worth, is that Germany will move against England, with all the force at her command some time in the spring. I think we shall see a big sea offensive first, and perhaps many feints in different parts of the world, even the Pacific—but the most decisive factor in the war will be the fate of Britain. If we stand up, as I believe we shall, against the worst that befalls us, we shall have won the first round and our opponent will know beyond a doubt that his doom is sealed.

In the meantime, we shall go about our "business as usual." That, in the last war, became a discredited slogan as it seemed to indicate the profiteers' purpose at the expense of the soldiers' sacrifice. But this time it indicates the grit of the "little man"—for the shops and offices are in the front line now and on many a battered facade this brief message, sometimes accompanied by a tiny Union Jack, speaks volumes.

When many of those same facades have been tidied up, you will find them displaying a new art in window-dressing. Glass, of course, is going out of fashion, so instead windows of shops are being replaced will plastic board in the center of which only a tiny window of glass appears. But the broad expanse of board is not allowed to remain blank—it is decorated, not in any careless and half-hearted way but with considerable skill, with pictorial intimations of the goods displayed inside. Even a restaurant can show quite an attractive roast fowl and appropriate vegetables and fruits. So we try to be "grim and gay"—as Churchill says—at one and the same time.

This letter should have begun with the fire "blitz." It was a pretty grim affair—that particular night. I live about 12 miles out of London on a hill beyond Croydon and, although the Crystal Palace hill hides the city from view, we yet could see the vivid red glow and the clouds of smoke, though not the flames. Having only the stars for compass, we got out our maps and tried to plot the probable scene of the fire, thinking it must surely be only a few miles away. The bombers droned overhead like omnibuses on a busy route, and I'm afraid our hearts were very heavy at the sight and sound of what was happening. Next morning, of course, we knew the worst. Trains and buses disarranged, that's nothing new; but the smell of burning wood permeating the underground and the miles of hosepipes in the streets and over the balustrades of the bridges into the Thames, and the enormous pall of smoke over everything and, of course, the burning buildings still going strong—this was something bigger and worse, by far, than we had imagined. But someone at the Mansion House had the right idea—they'd broken out a clean new flag at the masthead, and at the Guildhall, too, they'd done the same. I'm not much of a believer in bunting as a rule, but I must confess to feeling that this was a most appropriate gesture.

The aftermath is naturally pretty ghastly. A considerable area of the city now reminds one of nothing so much as some of the battered towns of Flanders in the last war. Gaunt skeletons of buildings and churches, heaps of rubble covering the streets and an air of desolation over everything. Yet we see the daylight now in unexpected places and, in the new London that will arise out of these ashes, we may want to keep on seeing it instead of blocking it out with a medley of buildings.

The fire has had its sequel in legislation making everyone liable for duty as fire-fighters. Every occupier must take steps to insure that his premises are watched night and day and that adequate personnel is present to combat fires thereon at all times. This applies to houses as well, so in the suburbs we have our teams, each working in its own way, but designed to tackle the incendiaries when and whenever they fall. Each house has its buckets of water and bags of sand on the front porch, whilst stirrup-pumps and ladders are located at strategic points. I believe that the few remaining folk, not already working every hour they could, have welcomed the fire-fighting duties—it gives them a chance of being protagonists and not merely spectators.

This is, you see, our war. We are all in it, and we do not think of it as an affair of armies and generals or even countries and governments very much. Nor do we ever discuss the extent to which we are united—we take it just as a matter of course.

The Post Impressionist

A Gadget-Crazy World

I freely admit that I shan't see 49 again (nor 50, for that matter), but I won't be called old fashioned. I'm just sensible, and I'm proud. Proud of the American heritage of spiritual health and physical ruggedness. That is to say, I was proud of these pioneer qualities in our people, until I began to behold their recent degeneration.

Now take Saturday, March 9, for example. Is there any need to describe that great wave of moral shilly-shallying that plunged over the Nation from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific Coast. I don't think so. Almost every one of you participated in this shameless revelation of lack of character, of lassitude and of physical flabbiness.

Was there one among you who said, "No, I shan't call my radio serviceman to adjust the push buttons to the new frequencies; I'll go back to the old-fashioned but harder way of manual tuning?" I doubt it. I doubt it strongly. Most of you probably agree with what the assistant sales manager in my office said: "Manual tuning? Don't be silly, boy. Twirling that dial is no easy job. A fellow needs some relaxation after a day's work, and if you go pushing that thing around all week, you're bound to land up with a stiff arm on Sunday. Can't play golf with a stiff arm, you know. Silly to think of it."

Yes, those were the words of a man of 45, the father of three children, and the assistant sales manager in a $1,000,000 American corporation. But this weakness is not only a vice of the older generation; it has tainted the youngsters, too.

"Come, dear," I said to my 10-year-old daughter, Helen. "Help your mother prepare dinner by slicing the loaf of bread daddy bought in the baker's."

The child looked at me in alarm. "Why, daddy," she said, "you didn't. You really didn't, did you?"

"Did what, Helen?"

"You didn't come home with a loaf of unsliced bread? They would have sliced it at the baker's. They have a bread-slicing machine there."

"Machine," I snorted. "What do I care about a machine? Have we no bread knives?"

"Oh, daddy," she laughed, "you're so old-fashioned. Nobody uses bread knives any more. Everybody buys sliced bread now." And for her that settled the matter.

Those incidents taught me something—a secret of profound importance. Those incidents revealed to me the reason for our national weaknesses. The reason is a simple one—gadgets! Gadgets are the cause of our national weaknesses.

Now take my neighbor's 23-year-old son for an example. He had just received his draft notice and was packing his things while my wife and I were playing bridge with his parents.

"I say, dad," he said when he came downstairs, "I'm a bit worried about Army life." My neighbor looked up.

"Worried, Junior? That's strange. You were pretty sure of yourself up to now. What's wrong, son?"

"Well, you see, dad," said the boy, "I was just packing my stuff, and I put my electric razor into the suitcase, when suddenly it occurred to me—do they have electricity in the Army? Can a man use his electric razor, or does he have to go back to the old-fashioned way of shaving with a brush and soap and a safety razor?"

That's the sort of thing I mean.

But before his father could say a word, I stood up. "Young man," I said, shaking my finger, "if I am not mistaken, George Washington did a pretty good job of defending our country without an electric razor. And if I do not err, Pershing did very well in France without these tom-fool gadgets. You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

But the boy was not to blame. The gadget mania is one of our worst diseases. It has spread over the whole of America. Even the people in those small faraway towns in the West and South have been affected by the disease.

There's my wife's Aunt Hattie, for instance. She visited us recently for the first time in 20 years, and 10 seconds after she had stepped in'o the kitchen, she was talking gadgets.

"Why, Lillian, dear," she said to my wife, who was busy opening a can of peas, "what an old-fashioned can opener! It must take you hours to prepare a meal. Why don't you just buy yourself one of those new rotating can openers that you screw on the wall. Just clamp the can on and turn the handle. Then—one, two—the can is open and your supper is on its way."

"Over my dead body," I shouted, and Aunt Hattie hasn't talked to me since.

But that wasn't all. My eldest daughter came back from college between semesters a few months ago, and I met her in the hallway in the morning with something wrapped around her face.

"What's the matter, dear, toothache?" I asked.

"Why, father," she laughed, "that's ridiculous! Don't you know what this is?" and she undid it.

"No, I don't!"

"Why, father," she said in surprise, "this is a chin lift. You tie it on when you go to sleep, and it prevents your chin from sagging. Double chins aren't popular with the boys, you know."

—Well, you get the idea. These potato peelers, ear plugs, sleep masks, hot cans and push-button radios are ruining us. And I'm not old fashioned.

Economic Manager

By Ernest K. Lindley

Leon Henderson's New Job

LEON HENDERSON'S assignment as Administrator of Prices and Civilian Supply makes him the key economic manager of the country. To do his job thoroughly he may need more formal authority than he now has. But he may be able to do it well enough with the power the President was able to confer on him by executive order. For he is both resourceful and tough.

LINDLEY

His chief duties are two:

First, to prevent an upward spiraling of prices, such as occurred in World War I.

Secondly, to see that civilian needs are met as amply as possible after military needs have been filled.

On business this means a double pressure. It means pressure to hold prices down and to expand to satisfy civilian needs on top of military needs.

On labor it implies pressure, now or eventually, to keep wage demands within reason. Wages cannot keep on going up without forcing prices up. But as Henderson has shown by promptly slapping a ceiling on steel prices, business will not be permitted arbitrarily to increase prices on account of wage raises. Under Henderson, business may not get the benefit of the doubt, but he is not an unreasonable person. The New Deal thesis is that if the cost of living is prevented from jumping, labor will not have an argument for wage demands so excessive as to keep the price spiral moving upward.

HENDERSON'S appointment shifts the balance of power in the whole national defense administration. Officially he is on a parity with OPM under Knudsen-Hillman. Actually his powers in many respects are broader than theirs. While they, with the Army and Navy, are responsible for defense production, he is responsible for over-all economic management and for production outside the defense field.

In the first months of the National Defense Advisory Commission, Henderson was something of a thorn in the side of the Knudsen group and the Army and Navy. He was the one New Dealer powerful enough to challenge their judgment. He lost most of his fights, but he won a few.

When OPM was set up, Henderson seemed to have been eased out of the picture. Instead of being put in charge of priorities, he was made only a member of the priorities board. The actual administration was assigned to Edward R. Stettinius, jr. The future of the rump NDAC, including Henderson, was doubtful. He took a fierce lunge at the lumber dealers, resigned from the priorities board, and went off on a long vacation. The relief among some of the businessmen at OPM was visible.

THE DISCLOSURE three weeks ago through Newsweek and this column that Henderson was to be made head of a new Price Administration, with rank equal to Knudsen's, caused no little turmoil at OPM. Apparently no previous intimation of this impending event had reached there. On Henderson's return to Washington he was sought out by OPMers and invited to enter that organization as head of a new price division, or something of that sort. There, of course, he would have been a subordinate. But Henderson smilingly waved aside these invitations. As it happened, the executive order making him Price Administrator already had been drafted and awaited only the President's signature.

Since he came to Washington in the summer of 1933, Henderson has had his ups and downs, but each time he has gone up it has been a little higher. He got Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's attention at a meeting called to vent the complaints of consumer groups concerning NRA. Henderson was so cogent in his criticism that Johnson gave him an off-hand public invitation to come into NRA and try to make it work better. Henderson accepted the challenge, and became chief of research and statistics for NRA.

When NRA folded, he became an economic adviser to the relief administration under Harry Hopkins. Early in 1937 Henderson began to warn that prices were getting out of line and that a business recession was in the offing. The President finally took heed enough to issue a moderate warning or two of his own.

THE RECESSION came in the fall of 1937. But the President took the hopeful view, urged upon him by more conservative advisers, that it was due chiefly to the overaccumulation of inventories and that recovery would come soon. Henderson made himself thoroughly unpopular at the White House by challenging this interpretation. Finally, after six months or so of waiting, while economic indices continued to fall with frightening rapidity, the President concluded he had been getting bad advice. He called in Hopkins and Henderson and a few others. The result was a new spending program which promptly turned the recession into a sharp recovery.

In the summer of 1938, Henderson was made executive secretary of the Temporary National Economic Committee. In this job he turned an extensive knowledge of American industry into a truly encyclopedic one. He was appointed later to the SEC, but he kept his active interest in the TNEC until the end, a few weeks ago.

As a member of the NDAC Henderson got under the skin of some of the businessmen brought into the Government, but his moderate and pragmatic views infuriated the trust-busters in the Department of Justice. For he frankly sought the cooperation of industrial groups in keeping prices in line, and did not resort to crack-downs until the need for them was clear.

INTELLIGENT businessmen were among his chief backers for his present post. Perhaps the most influential was Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board of World War I. Henderson had studied the entire record of the War Industries Board and related agencies. He sought Baruch's advice. As a result he knew considerably more about general economic management during a war period than did the businessmen brought in by Knudsen.

Henderson gets along beautifully with such men as Donald Nelson, executive vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., now serving as head of the purchasing division of OPM, and William L. Batt.

This new post is the biggest job Henderson has held. But he is well equipped for it, both in knowledge and courage. His appointment was heartening not only to the New Deal crowd but to the more far-seeing businessmen in the defense organization.

The Once Over

Letter From Home

DEAR OSCAR:

Your letters mean so much to me that I can't tell you how anxious I am for the mailman to come each day. It is good to know you are putting on weight and feeling so good in spite of all the hard work which you are not used to. All your life when you were home it seemed to me you lost weight and got that all-in feeling every time you exerted yourself and I have to laugh now when I think how tired you used to get even bringing up a hod of coal. So what the Army has done to you must be wonderful.

I am sorry you get put on kitchen police duty so much and I do not understand why they pick you out as you never did no police work and always avoided the kitchen. Why do they have policemen in the army kitchen unless they are awfully suspicious of the cooking? It must embarrass the cook as I know I could not cook at all if I had a policeman watching me.

I cannot see why if you are a kitchen policeman they make you peel potatoes as it is not dignified enough for a policeman and on the other hand it is not fair to ask a potato peeler to be any good as a policeman.

I am happy that you are meeting so many nice boys but I cannot understand why you ask me to send you a little money so often, although you know I love you and would give you all I have. I read in a paper that some of the beginners in the Army were always losing money in dice games and I hope you do not shake dice as I never knew you to shoot dice and you would be sure to be victimized by the professionals in the Army. I asked your father about this and he said it takes years for a dice shaker to get out of the amateur class, and he said that he found this out in the last war. He would not go into details.

The snapshot you sent me did not look much like you and I guess it was the terrible haircut the camp barber gave you like you said. I will write a letter to Washington and sign it "A Mother" and ask why if the Democrats have so much power and are so keen about everybody's happiness they don't cut the Army's hair with barbers who know their business. All the generals seem to have good haircuts, I notice.

I hope your feet are not so sore and that you are getting used to long walks, as I know how you hated walking when home and would not even go to Schmidt's market for me on account of your feet hurting. I hope you do not get into any tank service as I have just come from the newsreels and seen these tanks in action and they look more dangerous to the people inside than New York buses. I am sure the boys inside the tanks get hurt more than they hurt any enemy.

In the picture a tank drove right straight through a house smashing it to pieces and it ran into big trees pushing them down with no trouble. Of course, this is done every Saturday and Sunday by ordinary auto drivers all over the country, but in the tanks it's so intentional. If you get into one of those tanks I hope you will not drive through any buildings unless it is strictly necessary, and not do it just for the newsreel men. You are a wild enough driver without getting any new ideas in the Army, Oscar.

I am very nervous about the war news especially in the Balkans and some place called Egypt, and I wish we wouldn't promise to save everybody including Greenland. I would hate to see you in Greenland because I just read a piece by Lindbergh which says it is cold and foggy most of the time. I bet you would never find a letterbox up there.

But maybe I worry too much. The only thing that cheers me up is that you are such a fine son and are doing so well and not kicking. I cannot wait to get up and see you again. Take care of yourself and know that you have my love and prayers all the time, dear boy.

Your loving Mother.

Death Of Lord Stamp

A Blow To Empire's Councils

By the Associated Press

London, April 17.—Direct hits by German bombs on a pleasant Kentish country home have killed Lord Stamp, perhaps the most valuable business brain of the British empire, his wife and their heir, the Hon. Wilfrid Carlyle Stamp.

In all, six members of the household died when the Stamp home at Shortlands, on the southern outskirts of London, burst apart under the impact of high explosive bombs at the height of London's greatest raid and collapsed on a shelter.

The 60-year-old economist was killed instantly, physicians said. The bodies of Lord and Lady Stamp were the only ones recovered tonight. Those of their eldest son and three maids of the Stamp household lay under a heap of debris.

THE ONLY survivor was another maid, who was dug from the wreckage.

Death of Lord Stamp was a blow to the economic leadership of the empire. Since the start of the war he had been a principal adviser to the government on the economic problems of its struggle and had headed an interdepartmental committee on coordination.

His keen knowledge of American economics made him especially valuable with the growing dependency of Britain on the United States war supplies.

For years he had traveled frequently in the United States, in Canada and in Australia. He was better known as Sir Josiah Stamp. For he was elevated to the peerage less than three years ago, becoming the first Baron Stamp of Shortlands.

He would have been 61 years old on June 21. He held honorary degrees from Harvard, Columbia, California, Northwestern, Johns Hopkins, Southwestern, Syracuse, Duke and Washington and Lee universities.

From a clerkship, he became in half a century the head of the great London, Midlands & Scottish Railway, a director of the Bank of England, and a leading figure in many of the British industries of war and peace.

THE WORLD outside Britain knew him chiefly as economist, author and lecturer.

He was rugged, plain and affable and, to the American ear, his accent didn't sound British.

Three years ago he was Adolf Hitler's guest at the Nuremberg Nazi Party Congress, and his efforts to avoid the war and the economic chaos he knew would follow it were notable.

But when war came, he devoted all his energy to trying to win it in his especial field, that of economics. Particularly, he tried to impress on Britons that they must tighten their belts, cut down on consumption of food and clothing to conserve American dollars for war supplies and "get rid of this notion that it is necessarily a fine thing to carry on as usual."

Lord Stamp was, however, no slave to the government's policy. Only a month ago he assailed what he described as bureaucratic muddling which had tangled wartime industrial output.

His new heir is Trevor Charles Stamp, 34, who is married to the former Frances Dawes Bosworth, of Evanston, Ill. The new Lord Stamp is a lawyer.

Wilfrid Carlyle Stamp was 36 years old. There are two other sons.

Among them was Thomas W. Lamont, the financier, who telegraphed The Post last night:

"The news of the death of Lord Stamp and his wife in last night's bombing raid over London is sad reading for his many American friends. Josiah Stamp was an extraordinary British product of modest lineage but of high education, a constant student of economic and financial problems and an executive of outstanding achievement.

"To some of us Josiah Stamp's first appearance was as one of the British experts in the London conference of 1924, which set up the Dawes Plan in German reparations, and he was the chief of the British delegation at the Young Plan conference in 1929. Following his success there, he received additional honors upon his return to England. He was one of the directors of the Bank of England and was chosen to solve the complex problem of railway transportation, and of course had been most active in war work.

"His American friends will, however, cherish his memory first of all because of his extraordinary kindliness, his straightforwardness, his fidelity to all engagements, and the whimsical humor which rendered his natural ability as a negotiator so effective. It is a personal loss like this that brings home to us the tragedy that hangs over the torn and tortured streets of London."

CHARLES G. DAWES wired the following tribute:

LORD STAMP

"It is a difficult thing in the immediate shadow of a great tragedy like that of yesterday which engulfed Lord and Lady Stamp, their son Wilfrid and thousands of others in London, to write a tribute to Lord Stamp cataloguing the great achievements which crowded his life. I do not think under the circumstances he would want me to do it.

"He and his wife and son lie dead beside many of their neighbors and friends, beside many of their fellow townsmen of London, beside many little children, young men and women just starting in life, beside many old men and women almost through with it, all of whom have fallen in the battle for the splendid people of England and their free institutions, so many of which they have transmitted to us and our Nation. I know he would want me to speak of those who had died with him rather than of himself.

"He was that kind of man. For his whole life he has served the English people; for the most of the time without remuneration. When any national crisis for the last 20 years threatened in England—in labor, industry or finance—there rose the cry "call in Stamp," and he always responded and his reports and recommendations became masterpieces and pointed national precedents. He was indefatigable in great affairs of state, domestic and international. Lloyd George once called him "the greatest practical economist in the world." Like all those who lie dead beside him he has fallen gloriously in the line of duty. I think this is what he would like me to say."

E. A. GOLDENWEISER, economist of the Federal Reserve System, said:

"Lord Stamp was the outstanding economist engaged in the practical affairs of our time. With amazing industry, he succeeded in combining active work as head of the London, Midlands and Scottish Railway and as director of the Bank of England with painstaking research into statistical and economic material for many lands and in many languages. He had wide connections with scientific and educational institutions—British, foreign and international. To all his many duties Lord Stamp brought energy, enthusiasm, a fresh and practical viewpoint combined with deep appreciation of cultural and humanitarian values.

"Since the summer of 1939 and until recently Lord Stamp was the head of a governmental survey of economic and financial plans. The survey reviewed the entire field of economic forces, needs and trends, attempted to foresee coming developments and to recommend necessary action to avoid economic dangers and to strengthen the nation's effort.

"He has now fallen on the field of battle. Statesmen and economists all over the world, as well as all lovers of Britain and of the democratic way of life, bow down in sorrow from this cruel blow."

OWEN D. YOUNG wired:

"My friend Josiah Stamp has with his wife fallen victim in the war which for 20 years he has so intelligently and devotedly sought to avert. His efforts were based on good will for all people. He was one of the world's greatest men judged by any standards, and his loss, great as it seems now, will be found to be greater in the future."

DANIEL WILLARD, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, said that Lord Stamp once told him he had refused a peerage for several years because he did not consider himself a wealthy man and felt the burden might be too great for his eldest son.

Long-time friend of Lord and Lady Stamp, Willard said he was "deeply shocked" at news of their deaths.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Roosevelt's Popularity Reaches New High

Princeton, N. J., April 17.—President Roosevelt's personal popularity has climbed to an all-time high in the American Institute's seven-year Presidential popularity index.

The latest Nation-wide survey finds that 73 per cent of voters with opinions on the subject express a vote of confidence in Franklin D. Roosevelt. Only 27 per cent said they disapprove of him as President.

His new popularity figure tops the 71 per cent found supporting the President at the time of his third term inaugural in January, and the 72 per cent recorded in a similar Institute survey last month.

Reelected by 55 Per Cent

The President was reelected last November with 55 per cent of the major party vote.

More than 80 separate surveys have been conducted by the Institute on Roosevelt's standing with the public during the past seven years. These have shown that Roosevelt has never been a "minority" President—that is, his popularity, as recorded in these surveys, has never fallen below the 50-50 line, although there was a time—in September, 1935—when the President received only 50.5 per cent support.

Until this spring the highest points in the personal popularity index were 69 per cent in the beginning of 1934, and 70 per cent in May, 1940, when the Nazi armies were overrunning France.

Vote of Confidence

Today's figure does not necessarily mean that the voting strength of the New Deal would run as high as 73 per cent if an election had to be held today. Rather, it is to be regarded as a vote of confidence of President Roosevelt at this stage of his third term.

In England, in surveys by the British Institute of Public Opinion, latest results show 80 per cent of Britons approving Churchill as prime minister.

President Roosevelt's personal popularity at this time is unquestionably due to the war crisis in Europe. The Institute has repeatedly found in past surveys that the Roosevelt popularity index rises during time of emergency, at home and abroad.

Not Blanket Endorsement

This does not mean, however, that American voters who approve of Roosevelt necessarily approve of all his policies. In fact, experience has shown that many times the public has opposed some specific Roosevelt policy while at the same time approving Roosevelt in general.

During the fight over the Supreme Court proposal in 1937, for example, a majority of voters approved the President although they were against his scheme for changing the Court.

Struggle For The Mediterranean

ACCORDING TO HITLER "navies are the obsolete toys of plutocratic nations." Acting on that belief the tremendous German rearmament effort that began in 1933 went primarily into the building of a huge army and air force and only to a limited extent into the building of a fleet. And that fleet was designed entirely for commerce raiding and not, as was true of the German high seas fleet of 1914, as an instrument with which the Reich might wrest command of the seas from Great Britain.

NOVER

In Norway, a year ago, Hitler's gamble on air power as an effective counterweight to sea power, appeared to justify itself. In that venture the British fleet was able to inflict heavy damages on the German navy. But that did not prevent the German land and air forces from taking possession of the invaded country and forcing the British to withdraw.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN Hitler is making another attempt, though on a far more ambitious scale than in Norway, to neutralize Britain's superiority in sea power with Germany's superiority on land and in the air. The cost may be prodigious but the gamble is one for great stakes. If Hitler succeeds, Great Britain will be driven out of the Mediterranean.

At the moment, Hitler is limiting his Mediterranean efforts to the eastern end of that sea. His armies which occupied Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria have apparently cut Yugoslavia into ribbons and are now pressing down hard on the Greek-British lines. How long the Allies can hold in the face of this pressure is problematical. Their outlook is grave.

CONCURRENT with the attack on Yugoslavia and Greece, Nazi forces began a spectacular offensive in Africa. In 12 days, all of the territory won by Gen. Wavell's army of the Nile in its great westward drive into Libya was recaptured.

Hitler's Balkan and African moves are not isolated ventures. They form part of a coherent pattern of action. They are the two blades of a gigantic pair of scissors with which he hopes to cut the British lifeline in the eastern Mediterranean.

If Hitler wins in the Balkans he would secure bases from which to bomb British strongholds and communication lines in the eastern Mediterranean. It is doubtful, however, whether he could by such action alone force the British to abandon their positions in that area. And as long as the British maintained effective control of Alexandria and the canal they would be able to harass the extended German lines should Hitler attempt to cut through Turkey to reach the oil fields of Irak. They would also be able to send reinforcements and supplies to the Turks.

The drive on Egypt, in other words, is for Germany the essential corollary to the drive in Greece.

IN LAUNCHING his offensive in Africa Hitler thumbed his nose at British sea power. Taking advantage of the fact that the passage between Sicily and the Libyan coast is narrow and can be traversed at night, he sent over a considerable force of men and machines. The assumption must be that he does not believe the problem of supplying this German army in Africa will prove difficult despite the long distance between Tripoli and the Axis outposts in Egypt. Hitler believes, in other words, that British sea power can be circumvented.

PERHAPS IT CAN. The British fleet has a staggering task to perform. Its lines are necessarily spread thin, so thin, in fact, that the toll of British merchant shipping losses steadily mounts. Yet, in view of what happened in the Straits of Sicily last Tuesday it is evident that it is still capable of administering heavy blows to the enemy.

On that day five Italian ships carrying men and supplies to the Axis forces in North Africa were sent to the bottom, as were the three Italian destroyers serving as escort. This action alone does not mean that the lifeline upon whose maintenance the German-Italian army in Libya and Egypt must depend for food and supplies is now broken. It does show that it can be seriously interrupted. And with that army stretched clear across to Egypt even interruptions can have serious consequences. For with the war in East Africa fast approaching its final end Great Britain is now in a position to release to the Egyptian front a considerable number of troops and planes that have been engaged in ridding Ethiopia, Eritrea and Somaliland of their Italian masters.

It may be of more than passing significance that the British garrison at Tobruk, which the Axis forces passed by to take Derna and push on into Egypt, is still holding out; that during recent days the main British forces appear to have put up fairly effective resistance in the Salum area and that the R. A. F. claims local mastery of the air over the western desert.

Despite the temporary setback of the Axis forces in Egypt, it cannot be assumed that they have been permanently halted. But it is quite possible, in view of recent events, that the battle of Egypt may develop far differently from what Hitler expected. And a real setback in Egypt would go a long way to reduce the importance of any German victory in the Balkans.

'Roosevelt Can Have War,' Says Italian Radio

New York, April 17 (AP).—The Italian radio said today that President Roosevelt's statement that the law requires the Government to protect American ships wherever they operate outside of declared combat zones appeared as a "challenge" to the Axis powers.

The broadcast said that "if the consequence is war, Mr. Roosevelt can have it." The statement, as transcribed by C. B. S., said:

"One thing may be taken for granted. He cannot bluff the Axis. The Axis will carry out the blockade of Britain and Egypt whatever Mr. Roosevelt may plan. . . . If the President is bluffing, we shall call his bluff . . . The winning cards are all ours."

Correspondents Give Editors Panorama Viewpoint on War

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

A panorama of the war, seen from the viewpoint of war correspondents who have just returned from London, Berlin and Rome, was held up to the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the National Press Club last night.

Lloyd Lehrbas, of the Associated Press, who saw the German blitzkrieg hit Poland on September 1, 1939, acted as moderator, and asked the correspondents if they expected the Nazis to invade England.

Joseph Harsch, of the Christian Science Monitor, who recently came home from Berlin, said that the conquest of England was Hitler's primary objective, and the conquest of Russia his second. The invasion of England, he said, is in a true sense already in progress. The sinking of ships and the bombing of factories, he said, is an important part of it with the actual landing of troops the final phase. That phase will come, he said, when Germany is satisfied that the time is ripe.

James (Scotty) Reston, of the New York Times, who served in London, thought that much depended on what the United States did. If Germany finds she can continue sinking British and Allied ships, he said, she will do so, at the same time blasting England from the air. In the meantime, if Germany can find a weak spot, he said, she "probably will throw something in there."

Drew Middleton, of the Associated Press, another London veteran, said he thought the Germans would attempt an invasion. He said that while he wasn't any too optimistic, he believed that the British would "throw out" the Nazi parachute hordes and troops landed in barges. He said the slaughter would be terrific.

Charles Smith, London man for the International News Service, agreed with Middleton. He said the English were "itching" for an invasion attempt and were confident they could repel it.

Savile Davis, who represented the Christian Science Monitor in Rome, said that the Germans were "delighted" when the Italians suffered defeat in Africa and Albania. Their failure, he said, gave the Germans an excuse to put the Italians in their place and to stop them from making a nuisance of themselves.

American Press 'Self-Conscious,' Professor Says

The Nation's editors yesterday gave a college professor a chance to tell them some "unpleasant things" about themselves. He did tell them, and the result was a lively debate at the nineteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the Willard Hotel.

Prof. Peter H. Odegard, of Amherst College, accused the American press of being too "self-conscious." This, he said, indicated three things—"a sign of immaturity, failing powers, and a consciousness of guilt."

He saw the business office exercising a "subtle" influence on the editor. He pictured publishers as "big-business men" who, in associating with the rich and powerful, come to "share their political and social views."

The great editor, Prof. Odegard said, is one "who lets the chips fall where they may and never pulls his punches in order to hear the pleasant ringing of the cash register."

Having thus dealt with the editors, Prof. Odegard saluted the American press, saying that, from the standpoint of honesty and integrity, it was so much better than the press of any other land that there was simply no comparison.

In the round-table discussion that followed, Grove Patterson, rotund editor of the Toledo Blade, reminded Prof. Odegard that a newspaper had to make money in order to be free. The professor, in his talk, agreed with this view, conceding that a newspaper on the verge of bankruptcy was not likely to be a champion of courage and justice.

Patterson said that, in 30 years of newspaper work, he had never had an advertiser try to tell him how to run his newspaper. The advertiser, he said, was interested only in the paper's circulation.

Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, said that all editors must realize that the American press had plenty of faults. He said he was not worried by the facts that a majority of newspapers "stuck their necks out" in 1936 and 1940 by opposing Roosevelt. He thought that was a healthful thing and didn't make much difference, anyway.

The chief fault of American newspapers, he said, was in catering too much to its readers, in giving them what he called "pap." Thus, he said, there has been a tendency to play up small British victories and play down important German victories. Democratic pressure, he pointed out, could be more dangerous to newspapers than plutocratic pressure.

Stephen C. Noland, editor of the Indianapolis News, said that Prof. Odegard's criticism had left him "resolute in my complacency." He said it was quite true that the press was the organ of the capitalistic system; that it was bound to be that way.

Telling about the fierce independence of the Indianapolis News, he said that in 1887 one of its editors had spelled the word heighth as "hight," and had insisted that if he had written it that way—then that was the way it was spelled. The News, he said, still spells it "hight." He said that the Insull power people had withdrawn its advertising in 1927, "ruining" the paper's financial page." The News, he said, had never worried about it, and neither had it worried over the fact that for 30 years it had been on the losing side of a gas fight.

Hamilton Owens, manager of the Baltimore Evening Sun, and Marvin H. Creager, editor of the Milwaukee Journal, challenged a statement by Prof. Odegard that organized labor mistrusted the American press. Owens said that it was not organized labor, but the leaders of organized labor, that mistrusted the press, and he accused the leaders of instilling this mistrust in their followers.

Prof. Odegard said that his views on labor were based on his reading of the labor newspapers.

"Do you think the labor press is fair?" Creager asked.

"Oh, no," said Prof. Odegard.

At the opening session of the society, Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times and president of the A. S. N. E., read a letter from President Roosevelt saying that there would be "no Government control of news unless it be of vital military information."

Wallace blamed the United States more than its neighbors to the south for the failure of the American nations to be "truly neighborly."

"We have indulged, maladroitly and mistakenly," he said, "a superiority complex with regard to Latin Americans, who as a result have shrugged their shoulders."

At the editors' luncheon, Dr. Vergil D. Reed, acting director of the Bureau of the Census, said that the combined circulation of the 8,249 newspapers counted in the 1940 census was 62 million copies—the greatest total ever recorded.

Dr. Reed said that the average American is now 29 years old, whereas he once was 16. Americans 65 years of age or over, he said, now number nearly 9,000,000, a gain of 35 per cent in the decade.

The society will elect officers this afternoon, and tonight will end its convention with an off-the-record banquet at which Lord Halifax, Col. William J. Donovan and Laughlin Currie will speak.

The editors had an off-the-record talk with Secretary of State Hull yesterday afternoon.

PROF. PETER ODEGARD
Told Editors 'Unpleasant Things'

Clipped From President's Letter

Dear Mr. Wallace:

The assurance I would bring to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, if it were possible for me to greet them in person, would be that free speech and a free press are still in the possession of the people of the United States.

Free speech is in undisputed possession of publishers and editors, of reporters and Washington correspondents; still in the possession of magazines, of motion pictures and of radio; still in possession of all the means of intelligence, comment and criticism. So far as I am concerned, it will remain there, for that is where it belongs.

How that freedom should be used, what contributions it should make to national defense, national interest and national morals, are questions for publishers and editors themselves to decide.

It would be a shameful abuse of patriotism to suggest that opinion should be stifled in its service. Unified national sentiment, which all of us should desire, bears no resemblance to a totalitarian regimentation of opinion and treatment of news.

I cannot better close this message to the American Society of Newspaper Editors than with a final assurance that those who disagree with what is being done and with the manner in which it is being done are free to use their freedom of speech.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Drive to Raise $10,765,000 for Service Clubs

Plans for a Nation-wide campaign to raise $10,765,000 to staff and equip service clubs in connection with the national defense program were drafted yesterday at a conference of 1,000 community leaders.

The drive will begin June 3 and last until July 4, according to the program adopted at a one-day Willard Hotel session which heard a message from President Roosevelt and pep talks by Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Gen. George C. Marshall, Paul V. McNutt and others.

Sponsored by the United Service Organizations, a union of six national service bodies, the fund-collecting program is designed to finance operation of 339 service clubs adjacent to major camps and naval stations and, possibly, to defense industrial centers as well.

Construction of the club buildings is to be under an allotment in the $150,000,000 community facilities bill now pending in Congress.

Their conference confined to a single day, lack of hotel accommodations precluding a longer session, the approximately 1,000 delegates were dispersing to their homes last night, bent on setting in motion the plans discussed yesterday.

Divided Into Eight Regions

The country has been divided into eight regions for the national campaign. In the Eastern region is Washington, along with New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

Quotas for each region will be announced later.

President Roosevelt, in his message to the assembly which was read by Federal Security Administrator McNutt, termed the program "a great enterprise." He warned that "in times of emergency like the present, complacency is a luxury which we must cast aside."

"I cannot emphasize too strongly my conviction," said the Chief Executive, "that this work which you have come here to initiate is of the utmost importance. If national defense is to be an all-out effort, the preservation—yes, and the strengthening—of spiritual and social values is imperative."

"Too Much Complacence"

Secretary of War Stimson said the delegates face "a vital problem of our national defense—to develop within this country a spiritual amakening, a morale, which shall make us impregnable to any threat from either within or without."

Warning that the average American citizen is not aware of the dangers facing the United States, Stimson said:

"There is prevalent in too many places a spirit of complacency, of indifference and even of cynicism."

Secretary Knox characterized the United Service Organizations as "the spring and the source of the spirit which will see this thing through." He praised its union of different creeds in pursuit of a common goal—the bolstering of American morale.

Affiliated with the U. S. O. are the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., National Catholic Community Service, Salvation Army, Jewish Welfare Board and National Travelers Aid Association. Walter Hoving, of New York, is president of the coordinating body.

McNutt Presides

McNutt, who presided over the first conference of its kind held since this country embarked upon its defense program last June, said it is a civilian responsibility "to provide the normal off-the-job activities for millions of young people uprooted from their normal lines and their home surroundings."

Other speakers included Frank L. Weil, president of the National Jewish Welfare Board; William L. Batt, deputy director of production, OPM; W. Spencer Robertson, executive chairman of the U. S. O.; Charles P. Taft, welfare and health coordinator in the Federal Security Agency.

Also Frederick Osborn, chairman of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation; Randall J. LeBoeuf, jr., president of the Travelers Aid Association; Mrs. Henry A. Ingraham, president of the Y. W. C. A. national board; Francis P. Matthews, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, and Commissioner Edward J. Parker, Salvation Army.

Following the Willard Hotel session, many of the delegates went to Camp Meade on an inspection tour.

Tour Fort in Cars

They were met near the entrance to the Regular Army post and driven around the reservation in cars and buses while officers pointed out places of interest.

At the reception center for recruits, Lieut. Col. Edward J. Rehmann, in charge of the center, explained to the group the method of "processing" recruits. The group also visited the Twenty-ninth Division hospital, division headquarters and various regimental units.

Following dinner, with some eating at the reception center mess hall and others at the Regular Army cooks' and bakers' school, the group returned to Washington.

Quit Aiding Allies, Lindbergh Urges as He Joins America First Committee

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 17.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh asserted tonight that "it will be a tragedy to the world—a tragedy even to Germany—if the British Empire collapses," but he opined that the "war was lost" by the Allies "even before it was declared."

He called for unity among people opposed to United States intervention and, in an address prepared for a rally in the Chicago Arena sponsored by the America First Committee, declared that "it is not yet too late for us to save our own country from the chaos and failure of this war."

Lindbergh said "that it is not within our power in America today to win the war for England even though we throw the entire resources of our Nation into the conflict.

Lindbergh stated that "England is in a desperate position" and added:

"Up to date she has lost every major campaign in which she has participated. Her shipping losses are of the utmost seriousness, and her cities have been devastated by bombs. Her geographical and economic position is as great a disadvantage in this age of aircraft and submarines as it was an advantage in the era of sailing ships."

He said the United States was able to defend itself against any foreign power, but held that if it was to maintain that ability "we must not expose our fleet in European war zones and we must stop sending most of our modern fighting planes abroad."

He also held that sending arms to Britain and Greece was a "mistake" because it "weakened our position," added to bloodshed in European countries and failed to change the "trend" of the war.

It was announced before Lindbergh spoke that he had become a member of the America First Committee.

Isolation Policy Urged by Nye

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, yesterday advised Americans to stop "hating and fearing" Nazi Germany and "concentrate our emotions on the future of the United States."

The isolationist leader said there was no denying that a German victory would pose "greater problems" for the United States than a British victory.

"But empires have never lasted forever," he continued, "and it is not written that the power called the British Empire must endure forever. We should be ready to adjust ourselves to whatever dominance comes to Europe."

Nye, speaking at a Cosmopolitan Club meeting at the Carlton Hotel, said the Administration is close to a convoy policy and that "we are marching straight down the road to war."

Whoever wins the war, Nye said, the terms of the peace settlement will contain the seeds of another conflict.

Better Meals Are Urged As Aid to Defense

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

WHAT can the homemaker do to aid in national defense? One answer has been given by Mrs. Clara Gebhardt Snyder, nationally known home economist who came to Washington to be the guest speaker at a dinner given by the local Home Economics Women in Business, of which organization she is chairman of the department of home economics.

"There is nothing especially dramatic about the things the homemaker can do to aid, only to do the daily job in her home better than she has ever done it before," said Mrs. Snyder. Asked what she considered good nutrition to keep the family fit in these strenuous days, she advised eating good standard dishes, and foods in season. "To think in terms of good nutrition does not mean that food need be unattractive and unpalatable," she said. "On the contrary, what could be more palatable, more attractive and nutritious than fresh asparagus served on toast with cheese sauce? It is certainly chuck full of vitamins. Rhubarb, too, makes many a tempting dish. Stewed rhubarb, rhubarb pie and rhubarb fluff—a modified souffle—are all excellent dishes.

Martha Ellyn

"Spring greens should be included in the diet, too. Serve them with your favorite meat or with bacon muffins. Eggs are more reasonable now and it is time to do many things with them. Pineapple Feather Cake and Daffodil Cake are both delicious cakes to make now that eggs are cheaper. Peanut Butter Cookies are chuck full of good nutrition and make a fine accompaniment for rhubarb sauce.

Shortcake Recommended

"Very soon strawberries will be available at reasonable prices, and strawberry shortcake is a nutritious dish. Make it with enriched flour and then serve with berries and cream and there will be a good amount of excellent nutrients consumed."

Mrs. Snyder understands the ways of food from many angles, for she has taught food classes, kept house and cooked meals, worked in food research, and now as the Director of Home Economics and Nutrition Division, Wheat Flour Institute, Chicago, presides over a laboratory-kitchen which she boasts is devoid of "ruffles."

In her laboratory-kitchen Mrs. Snyder directs seven other home economists who experiment with various types of wheat flour, create new recipes, write releases and answer thousands of recipe requests and give information about baking problems. The recipe most frequently requested, she says, is for refrigerator rolls.

The following is Mrs. Snyder's favorite shortcake recipe:

Shortcake—Sift together 2 cups enriched flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 2 tablespoons sugar. Cut or rub in ¼-cup shortening. Add ½-cup milk to make a soft dough, stirring just enough to make ingredients hold together. Turn out on lightly floured board, knead gently for a half-minute. Roll or pat to desired thickness. Cut into desired shape. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Yield, about 18 2-inch biscuits.

Expert on Flour

Enriched flour is a subject that Mrs. Snyder understands thoroughly. In fact she knows everything about flour from the time it is wheat, milled into flour, and makes its appearance on the table as tempting biscuits, pies and other products. She suggests that women make products with enriched flour because it has been made extra-nutritious by the addition of vitamins and minerals. She says it represents an economical, sensible way of providing the American people with some of the vitamins and minerals essential to health.

"In terms of the food we eat, 6 or 7 slices of bread a day, or 7 or 8 biscuits, made from enriched flour, will supply from one-fourth to one-third of the amount of these nutrients needed for buoyant health," Mrs. Snyder said. "Valuable as enriched flour is nutritionally, it is not intended to supply all the vitamins and minerals needed for health. It will supply generous amounts of them. Others will be supplied by meat, milk, eggs, cheese, fruits, vegetables and all the other foods that make good eating."

Asked if her organization had received many inquiries from homemakers about the use of enriched flour, and what information she gave in answer, Mrs. Snyder replied, "enriched flour looks, tastes and bakes like the excellent white flour homemakers have known for years. It may be used in the same recipes. The difference is that now, in addition to being America's most versatile and economical energy-yielding food, it is also an economical source of needed B-vitamins and iron. This flour may be had in plain flour and self-rising flour. The cost is only about ¼-cent per pound more than flour which has not been enriched with added vitamins and minerals."

Meat Pie Recipe

Meat Pie as made by Mrs. Snyder is a nutritious dish, which may be served in an attractive way. Here are her directions:

Meat Pie—Melt 1 tablespoon fat in a baking dish. Add 1 pound lean, cubed beef and brown well. Add 1 tablespoon flour, stirring until smooth. Add 1 cup diced potatoes, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 cup peas, 1 cup cut celery, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼-teaspoon pepper. Mix lightly. Cover and bake in moderate oven, 350 degree for 45 minutes. Remove cover and put diamond-shaped biscuits over top of pie. Return to hot oven, 450 degrees and bake for 15 to 20 minutes. To make the diamond-shaped biscuits follow this recipe:

Biscuits—Sift together 2 cups enriched flour, ¾-teaspoon salt and 3 teaspoons baking powder. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2-3 to 3-4 cup of milk—just enough to make a soft dough, stirring only enough to make ingredients hold together. Turn out on lightly floured board, knead gently for half-minute. Roll out dough a little thicker than ¾-inch. Cut with doughnut cutter. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in hot oven, 450 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes. Put a biscuit on hot plate, cover with chicken mixture, cover with second biscuit. Garnish with parsley or watercress. Yield, 6 servings.

Visions of Perfect Toast—Mrs. Clara Gebhardt Snyder, director of home economics and nutrition division, Wheat Flour Institute, who styles herself the Traveling Kitchen Organizer, is shown inspecting one of the latest in stream-lined toasters. As an exponent of Enriched Flour, she no doubt is considering that a perfect product like Enriched Flour bread toasted in this de luxe model toaster would leave little to be desired

This Is Open Season for Egg Dishes

The abundance of fresh, fine quality eggs at this season makes their price especially thrifty. The thoughtful homemaker with an eye to good nutrition and her fingers on the food budget will serve eggs in some form regularly.

Springtime meals can fairly sparkle if you follow the recipe suggestions of Kathryn Bele Niles, Home Economist, of the Poultry and Egg National Board.

Miss Niles has a legion of good suggestions for using eggs. A tempting noodle loaf is one of them. There are noodle loaves and noodle loaves, but the one this food expert suggests is particularly flavorsome. Made from her recipe and served with generous helpings of mushroom or tomato sauce it will make a hit as an entree. Bake it ring mold style for a change, using creamed fish, meat or vegetables in the center. Or try browned mushrooms, for they are always a favorite. Some spring asparagus, a crisp salad, a hot breadstuff, and beverage will round out the meal in a perfect manner. This is Miss Niles' recipe:

Noodle Loaf Or Ring—Cook 1 cup broken noodles in boiling salted water. Drain. Do not rinse. Add 1½ cups scalded milk, 1 cup fine soft crumbs, 1 package grated cheese (1½ ounces), ¼ cup butter, 1 tablespoons chopped pimento, parsley, and chopped onion, 3 slightly beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of cayenne. Set in a pan of hot water and bake until firm. Serve hot from casserole.

Or if you are planning a luncheon guest dinner build the menu around egg cutlets. Serve on your prettiest platter garnished with parsley or watercress and broiled tomatoes. Asparagus with Hollandaise sauce and creamed new potatoes also make a pleasing combination. The egg cutlets may be prepared hours in advance, except for the final cooking, which is always an advantage for a guest meal. The recipe for the Egg Cutlets follows:

Egg Cutlets—Make a sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour and 1 cup milk. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika and ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon each of grated onion, chopped parsley, a dash of nutmeg and 8 hard-cooked eggs coarsely chopped. Cool. Shape in cutlets. Dip in flour, then in egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep fat, (380 to 390 degrees F.). Insert a 2-inch piece of macaroni at one end. Serve with Bechamel sauce. Yield, eight 2-inch cutlets.

VITAMINS, WHAT THEY ARE AND HOW THEY CAN BENEFIT YOU, by Dr. Henry Borsook, professor of biochemistry, California Institute of Technology, answers hundreds of questions in an interesting way for the public which has become decidedly "vitamin-conscious."

If you want to learn the answers to the following questions read this book:

Why lack of vitamin A renders you unfit to drive a car.

Why Japanese born in California are taller than those born in Japan.

What vitamins B and C did for the Everest Expedition.

Whether you instinctively choose the foods you need.

Why peanut butter is called the "Cinderella among foods."

Where to buy "vitamin D" milk.

What sunshine has to do with vitamins.

Why vitamin E is important for expectant mothers.

What vitamins can do for the most painful diseases in the world.

How, without making any important changes in your diet, you can get all the vitamins you need.

Tables are given also of examples of a day's food for children and adults at different price levels. These tables show what an abundance of vitamins may be obtained on a restricted food budget as well as when the cost of the food is unimportant. The question of vitamins for those who eat in restaurants is also given, and menus for children as well as adults.

Food for Infants Make Excellent Dish for Adults

Do you know why canned baby foods have so little seasoning? It's because of the extreme sensitivity of a baby's taste. While adults have organs of taste or taste buds only on their tongues, babies have them on their tongues and inside their cheeks and throats. The extra taste buds gradually disappear until at the age of 12, a child has them only on the tongue.

This is the reason that a baby's food is not seasoned to the taste of an older person. But baby foods make excellent dishes for grown-ups, especially desserts. Because they come all ready to use they save a lot of fuss and bother. Try this recipe:

PRUNE WHIP—Beat 2 egg whites and ⅛ teaspoon salt until stiff; gradually beat in ¼ cup sugar; and fold in 1 5-ounce can strained prunes. Chill thoroughly. When ready to serve, place 2 or 3 lady fingers in each sherbet glass, if desired, and pile in prune whip. This recipe, poured into a refrigerator tray and allowed to freeze at coldest temperature for several hours, makes a delicious frozen prune whip. Serves four.

Two-in-One Dessert

A two-in-one dessert is a cake baked in a mold and filled with sherbet and ice cream. The recipe follows:

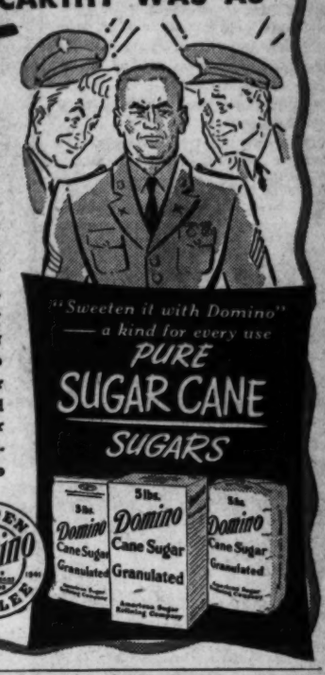

Easter Dessert—Bake a white or yellow cake in a ring mold. When cool, cover with light green-colored frosting and sprinkle with 1½ cups cocoanut. Place on large-sized serving plate. Garnish with flowers. Fill with eggs shaped from 1 quart orange sherbet and 1 pint vanilla ice cream. Serve immediately.

New Pear Note

Here's a dessert note that is as new as the latest scent of perfume. We found on the market just recently, halved pears, oven baked, coming to us from the Oregon orchard country. Packed in glass jars the pears are baked in their skins and show up tender and unwrinkled. To serve, heat the pears slightly just before serving time and add a tablespoon of brandy, Kirsch or other sherry.

SERGEANT McCARTHY WAS AS SWEET AS A LAMB

• Some one said the head-snapping Sarge has a new sweetie. He has. Fact is, whipping the boys into shape uses a lot of energy . . . as energy goes down, temper sours. But now Sergeant Mac is getting more energy from Domino sugars . . . special kinds for cereal, fruit, in his java and desserts. Domino is a flavor favorite. Sweet and delightful. No wonder the Sarge grows angelic.

Voice Worth Study, Vital To Charm

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT infuriates a man about back-seat driving is the tone of the little woman's voice, which sounds to him as if she is fault-finding. Naturally he resents it. So the next time your husband makes you so nervous you are almost ready to hop out and walk, just say to him, in a sweetly reasonable tone:

"I seem to be a little nervous today, dear. Would you just as soon drive slowly?"

He'll slow right down—for a while, anyway.

Of course, you don't mean to adopt a nagging tone of voice. But when you are nervous, you get tense, the tension tightens your vocal chords, and what comes out is a voice about as musical as the twang of rubber bands. No wonder your better half snaps right at you! To do away with this, we're including the voice in our spring program.

Record Will Surprise You

You can get a much better idea of the way you sound to others by standing in a corner, with the face close to the walls, and talking to yourself in a conversational tone. The two walls throw your voice back at you and you have a fairly accurate gauge of the tonal quality.

The best way to appraise your voice is to have a record made. Only don't put your best tone forward. Just let yourself go and criticise your husband, or scold your children, and throw in a sharp remark or two for good measure. Then play the record back and see how you like listening to yourself. You'll probably be surprised at the fault you can find with the sound of your own voice.

The most common faults in voices are in tonal quality, which may be monotonous, harsh, shrill or corrosive; in hesitancy of speech, or in talking through the teeth. You can do quite a lot about remedying those defects yourself. Practice reading aloud, and listen to yourself. And instead of singing in the bathtub, repeat the vowels, letting your voice rise and fall. To eliminate the "ohs" and "ahs," think first what you are going to say, then take your time about saying it.

Bali Influence In Decoration

While a great part of the world lives in anxiety these strenuous days, the Balinese, on the exotic island in the Dutch East Indies, go on creating beautiful objects. The Balinese are expert craftsmen and make exquisite items of gold, silver and other metals; do intricate wood carving, and weave beautiful garments

The Hindu influence is predominant in the art of the island. The natives have a happy faculty of living in the present. They believe they are in eternity now—so why hurry? This philosophy no doubt accounts for the delicate and intricate objects they create.

Miss Sonya E. Henry, world traveler and lecturer, who is showing a collection of Balinese art objects at a local department store this week, says that the people are "soul artists" completely untouched by commercialism.

In the collection is a number of colorful Batik sarongs that Miss Henry shows how to make into a lovely tea gown.

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Social life, which during the Lenten season was virtually in control of the bourgeoisie has begun to pick up as top-flight notables are returning North for the "little season."

Arriving yesterday from Palm Beach was Miss Geraldine Sniffley, secretary of Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, ranking Truthtown dowager and commander of the Ladies Parachute Patrol. Miss Sniffley, wrapped in a heavy fur coat, timidly ventured out of a plane on her arrival here and sniffed the air. She said she had been sent as an advance scout to see if temperatures permitted the return of the Ladies' Patrol which has been drilling on the Arbuthnot Abercrombie estate at Palm Beach.

If Miss Sniffley decides that spring has really come to these parts, Mrs. Bellwether and the members of the patrol will return within the next week or so and resume their military maneuvers on the lawn of the Plush Sofa Club.

Mrs. Atterbury Husk who spent the winter in California, Mexico, Palm Beach, Miami, Nassau, Havana and Hawaii will return and open her town house next week.

On Again, Off Again

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt, who dashed here by plane from Cat Cay in order to get herself photographed in the Easter parade, was the honor guest at a welcome home party held Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. Juniper Bounce. Last night the Alexander Rhumbas gave a farewell party for Mrs. Flitt who left today to take a plane for Bermuda.

Clymer-Popinjay Marathon

Mrs. Roswell Clymer came off second best in a contest with her social rival, Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay, at a tea given by Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger in the Confucian Room of the Hotel Arabesque. By actual count of observers, Mrs. Popinjay took off and put on her shellrimmed harlequin spectacles 117 times, while Mrs. Clymer performed the gesture only 111 times.

Ex-Dinner Partner

"Oh how do you do, Mr. Sapwith!"

"Oh-er how do you do?"

"Have you recovered from last night?"

"Oh-er last night . . . Oh yes . . . yes indeed."

"Mrs. Trotter always has such nice parties, doesn't she?"

"Mrs. Trotter? . . . Oh yes . . . yes indeed."

"I've been laughing ever since over that story you told about the two Eskimos."

"Oh really. . . Yes. . . Yes. . . the two Eskimos!"

"And I was so terribly thrilled over your account of your Florida motor trip."

"Oh yes . . . yes . . . thank you."

"And your Tahiti experiences."

"Oh yes . . . yes . . . Tahiti."

"Oh and your philosophy of women."

"Oh yes. . ."

"And weren't you simply petrified when Mrs. Stalactite upset her demi-tasse?"

"Oh, yes . . . yes. . . Were you there then?"

"Yes indeed. Right at your elbow."

"What?"

"Yes, I was your dinner partner."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's Sarcastic Teasing Reduces Girl to Tears Just as Her Parents Walk in the Door; Now the Whole Family Is Down on Him; How Make Amends?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past two years, I have been a student at a local institution of higher learning. About six months ago, I met a very lovely girl who lives here with her parents. Whenever I had opportunity to do so, I would spend an afternoon at her home, just chatting with her. Our friendship grew and soon I began to like her a great deal.

One day recently, however, we were kidding each other along in a sarcastic sort of manner, when I made a remark that she misunderstood. I continued, without realizing that she resented every word I was saying. Finally, she broke into sudden hysteria, and I was at a total loss to know what to do. Just then, her parents walked in, and there was nothing for me to do but leave immediately.

I have tried since to talk with her by telephone, but her mother dismissed me in very angry tones. How can I get back in the girl's good graces? I like her very much. S. O. S.

The Conventional Form Of Chivalrous Apology

DEAR S. O. S.: In view of the "wet hen" mother and "cry baby" daughter involved in the contretemps, there is no guarantee that reasonable tactics will result in your restoration to favor in this particular household. However, inasmuch as you inadvertently but (so it seems) cruelly wounded the girl's feelings, I suppose you have a gentleman's obligation to do what you can to make amends.

Therefore, I suggest that you pursue the conventional pattern of chivalrous apology, in the event of "lovers' quarrel," by writing the girl a contrite note, lamenting your stupidity and its astoundingly regrettable effects upon her; begging to be forgiven; asking her to have the kindness to let you see her again and talk things over, so as to clear up (in your mind) the mystery of how you happened to offend her so gravely, when you certainly didn't mean to; and assuring her that no matter how badly she may feel as a result of your clumsy "kidding," you feel a thousand times worse for having committed the blunder.

Tell her that, as a humble peace offering, you are dispatching this note with the accompanying flowers (and then see to it that the letter arrives at her door simultaneously with prettiest bouquet or corsage your purse can afford). Conclude the note by saying you hope the flowers don't hit the ashcan with the same rapidity that you reached the doghouse; that you trust she will like them enough to keep them around a while, as a reminder that you are waiting and hoping and earnestly asking to be restored to friendship with her.

If, on receipt of such an overture, the girl doesn't come down off her high horse and merrily ask you in out of the cold, you had best dismiss her from mind as a neurasthenic pickle-puss, who is (and probably always will be) afflicted with a poisonous sense of her own importance. But it is my surmise that she thinks a great deal of you, or she wouldn't have succumbed to hysteria under the impact of your sardonic teasing. So if you apologize handsomely—giving her to feel that she is tremendously important in your scheme of things; and her good will indispensable to your enjoyment of life—I think the misunderstanding will immediately blow over, and you will again be as clubby as before. M. H.

Why Is It Attentive Man Never Asks Her for Dates?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 years old, considered attractive and a good dancer. I get along nicely with most men, but for two years I have been in love with a boy three years my senior, who has never asked me for a date. He dates other girls, but at parties he seems to be always with me. I am interested in knowing why I'm good enough for him at house parties—by which I mean, he always dances with me and shows me a great deal of attention—and yet he never asks me for dates. How can I get him to date me? I see him rather often. Please advise me. W. B.

His Party Manner Doesn't Mean a Thing

DEAR W. B.: On the basis of so little information, one can't hope to help you greatly with your problem. As to "why you are good enough for the young man at house parties," so that he dances with you often and shows you noticeable attention—one may surmise that (1) he dances with you often because you are a good dancer, and in that diversion, a partner possessed of grace and skill is vastly important; and (2) shows you a great deal of attention, possibly because you are a girl of so-called "good family," and he the type of young man who makes a point of "being nice to all the right people," whenever they are brought to his attention. Or he might be sharing his attentions co-equally among all the girls at the party, feeling that to be part of his "good guest" obligation—and you just imagining that he pays you special notice.

I am inclined to think his "party manner" toward you doesn't mean a thing, significant or personal. Likely it is just a way he has of endearing himself to his host or hostess, by being especially nice to the perhaps less popular girls. However, his punctilious conduct gives reason to believe that he might accept a two-some invitation of yours—issued on the assumption of old acquaintance. Supposing you were bidden to a party and told to bring a man, you might ask him to go along, and in that way have a "so-so" kind of date with him. If he is alert to repay his social obligations, very probably he would follow up with a "thank-you" date later on—and on two such tete-a-tete excursions you would have opportunity to start spinning a web of reciprocal interest. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Two Large Parties Begin Capital's Social Round In Honor of Distinguished Visitors From Brazil

By Hope Ridings Miller

TWO DISTINGUISHED BRAZILIANS—the Governor of the State of Rio de Janeiro, Commander Amaral Peixoto, and his wife, daughter of of President Vargas of Brazil—centered the Washington spotlight yesterday as the round of fetes in their honor got under way.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins entertained at dinner for the visitors last evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller gave an informal reception for them yesterday afternoon. This evening, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., will be hosts at dinner for Commander and Senhora de Peixoto, and tomorrow and Sunday there will be still more parties in their honor.

Thirty-four guests, headed by the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, attended the dinner last night. Others in the company were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Justice Frank Murphy, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative Joseph Martin, the Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. George Marshall, Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, the Brazilian Military Attache, Brig. Gen. Amaro Soares Bittencourt and Senhora de Bittencourt; Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, the Brazilian Second Secretary, Fernando Saboia de Medeiros, and Luis Sampaio, Brazilian industrialist.

The Foxhall Road estate known as Bakers' Acres—because it formerly was the home of the Lawrence Bakers and takes in 13 acres—was the scene of the gala fete yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock. Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller included Latin American envoys, State Department officials, a few members of Congress, the Cabinet and the Supreme Court and a scattering of Washingtonians. Before closing hour rolled around, almost 300 Capitalites had turned out to enjoy the pleasant party.

Although the party turned out to be a garden fete, with most of the guests flocking to the terrace that commands a gorgeous hillside view, the hosts and their honor guests received inside. Mrs. Rockefeller wore a navy blue silk frock, dotted in white and cut on simple lines. Senhora de Peixoto, who looks much too young to be a governor's wife, was smartly turned out in a light blue frock and a matching hat that contrasted becomingly with her dark hair and eyes.

WHEN A HOLLYWOOD celebrity gets by without attracting a lion's share of attention—it's news. But that's exactly what happened yesterday when Douglas Fairbanks, jr., was among those present. I doubt that ten persons in the entire throng knew he was there. But one or two guests spotted him early and a few others flocked around, and soon he was telling something of his plans to be off soon for South America.

United States officialdom was well represented in the crowd. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wearing a dark blue ensemble, accented in yellow, arrived early. Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones were there, also Mrs. Henry Stimson and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard.

SEEN IN PASSING: Senhora de Martins looked like a fashion plate in a dark brown basket-weave frock, set off with an electric blue straw halo hat that blended with her aquamarine clips, accepted from Jesse Jones a three-leaf clover "until I can find a four-leaf one—for luck," he said . . . Justice Frank Murphy squired pretty Miss Katherine Goodfellow through the crowd . . . Senator Robert Reynolds arrived with a lovely lady on each arm, but when I last saw him he was engrossed in talk with Miss Mary Winslow . . . Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, a popular center of attention . . . Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, in a purple ensemble, telling friends that her husband was to make a speech in Boston last night but would return to Washington this morning . . . Senora de Espil, wearing a perky little white sailor with a smart two-piece print frock, chatting with Mrs. Stanley Reed . . . Justice Reed, meanwhile, across the terrace, talking to the Max Truitts . . . The Peruvian Ambassador and Mrs. Truxtun Beale took their stand at a point of vantage and let the crowd collect around them . . . Senora de Pastoriza introduced her President's son and daughter-in-law, Weceslao Troncoso and Senora de Troncoso, to dozens of her friends at the party.

ONE OF THE PRETTIEST women there was Senora de DeBayle, wife of the Nicaraguan Minister. Her becoming bright yellow frock was set off with a tall-brimmed white hat, trimmed in yellow flowers. Also looking especially lovely was Senhora de Goutheir, but—for the life of me—I can't remember what she had on . . . Everywhere at once was Mrs. Paul Spaeth, who was an assistant hostess-on-the-wing; and a very lovely one, wearing a cocoa crepe frock—just the right shade to accent her blonde hair.

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera were there; also, the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Brin, and the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, who were meeting many Washingtonians for the first time. The Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, and the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro were there, as were all members of the Brazilian Embassy staff.

Still others I saw were Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, who told me that Senhora de Martins is planning to visit her at the King Ranch this summer; W. L. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, and a couple of hundred more.

Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, was ranking guest in a company of 12 at a dinner given last evening by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty in honor of Mrs. Orlando Dana, of New York. The Minister is in New York. Mrs. Dana is spending a few days in Washington en route to her home after an extended visit in Florida.

Garden in Bloom, Mrs. Woods Gives Cocktail Party

The unexpected full blooming of Mrs. Arthur Woods' garden in Georgetown was the inspiration for a pleasant cocktail party yesterday, when she hastily gathered together a group of friends.

Included were members of the Virginia Garden Tours committee in which Mrs. Woods, as chairman, is actively at work. Others in the party were out-of-town guests in connection with the meeting on Friday of the Harvard Overseers group at Dumbarton Oaks.

Mrs. Arnold's Luncheon Turns Birthday Fete

Mrs. Laurence F. Arnold's luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower turned unexpectedly into an impromptu birthday celebration. It was discovered that Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, wife of Senator Lucas, was observing a birthday, so everybody sang to her. In no time at all a waiter disappeared into the kitchen and returned with a gayly iced cake with one candle. Mrs. Lucas acted as cohostess at the luncheon.

Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was ranking guest at the party. The hostess, who is the wife of Representative Arnold, of Illinois, wore a black redingote with a striking hat and long sleeves of a matching black and white plaid material. The table was decorated with white and yellow snapdragons and purple iris.

In the company were Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. E. E. Cox, Mrs. Aaron L. Ford, Mrs. John R. Murdock, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. George W. Calver, Mrs. Kenneth Romney, Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Lawrence Clayton and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

Also Mrs. Benjamin Dorsey, Mrs. Thomas North, Mrs. McKenzie Davison, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Brison Norris, Mrs. Anita Peter, Mrs. George Tribble, Mrs. William Sims, Mrs. Margaret Schneider, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick, Mrs. Hardin Arledge, Mrs. Frederick Richardson, Mrs. Osmun Latrobe, Mrs. Newton Brewer, Mrs. Elizabeth Canada, Mrs. Cleveland Newtown and the Misses Meredith Howard, Agadia Newman, Anne Larabee and Antoinette Rudolph. Mrs. Noel Gates, well-known harpist, played during luncheon.

Mrs. Arnold was hostess again yesterday when she entertained a small group of wives of Representatives at tea in the Pan-American Room of the Mayflower. Mme. Victor Kwong, wife of the Attache of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Irene B. Caldwell and Mrs. Eugene Meyer attended, representing the committee for the United China benefit at Constitution Hall, April 27. Mrs. Paul V. McNutt is chairman of the committee in charge of the benefit, and Mrs. Meyer is vice chairman.

Mary Rowland To Wed April 26

Of interest in Washington was the recent announcement by Mrs. Charles Pinckney Rowland, of Savannah, Ga., of the engagement of her daughter, Mary Middleton Rowland, to Adrian Boisfeuillet Colquitt son of Mrs. Marmaduke Floyd, of Savannah, and the late William Neyle Colquitt, formerly of Washington. The wedding will take place April 26.

Miss Rowland attended Pape School and was graduated from the Hartridge School at Plainfield, N. J., and from Vassar College. She has also traveled and studied in Europe. She made her debut in 1934 and is a member of the Junior League of Savannah and of the Savannah Assembly.

Mr. Colquitt, who is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. H. Colquitt, of Washington, attended the Georgia School of Technology and later the University of Paris, where he prepared for the United States Foreign Service. He is American diplomatic and consular officer de carriere and has had important assignments in Ethiopia, Australia, South Africa, Panama and French Guiana. He has recently returned from his post as vice consul at Martinique.

Mrs. Clark Gives Party at Home In Spring Valley

Gayly informal was the small luncheon that Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark gave yesterday in her home on Quebec Street, Spring Valley. The fete was "organized" some time ago at another luncheon when one of the guests, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, plaintively observed that she spent a good part of her time going to parties in honor of other people but that nobody ever had one in honor of her.

"I'll give one for you," promptly promised Mrs. Clark. And yesterday's fete was the result. The hostess gathered in a few friends and treated them to her own special brand of hospitality. An impromptu program, accented with "testimonials" to Mrs. Griffin, comprised most of the table talk. Mrs. D. Worth Clark brought along a four-line poem. Mrs. William L. Stanley presented to the guest of honor a framed message of good will. Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Donald Richberg made brief speeches, very much on the informal side, and the party went merrily along.

Mrs. Knefler McGinnis Is Capital Visitor

Mrs. Knefler McGinnis, whose husband, Commander McGinnis, is on duty in Honolulu, is in Washington for a short visit.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

JUST SIT PATIENTLY in Washington, and everyone you ever heard of is likely to turn up before the year's over. Everybody from royalty on down is flocking here from South America, Europe and Asia, and even a fishing freighter doesn't dock anymore without a quota of newsreel faces.

Arriving shortly—probably next week—is the newly appointed Foreign Minister of China, Dr. Kuo Tai-Chi. For ten years he has represented his country as minister, then Ambassador, in London, and is stopping in Washington en route to his homeland. The diplomat is expected to come here by Clipper and will have his first reunion with his wife and little son for over a year. They came to this country shortly after war began and have been living in Tucson, Ariz.

LAST NIGHT the Chinese Envoy, Dr. Hu-Shih, gave a dinner at the Embassy, and will entertain again when Dr. Tai-Chi arrives. Now that commencement time is approaching, the distinguished Ambassador will doubtless be off again on another degree collecting tour. Last June he was honored by 18 American universities at their graduations. Dr. Hu-Shih is known all over the world as the father of the Chinese renaissance. For centuries the literature of his country had been written, not in the spoken language, but in a way which could be compared with Americans publishing all books in Latin. Thus only scholars could read the famous Chinese works. Dr. Hu-Shih began to write little poems in the spoken language, and before long others followed, with the result that writing in China was revolutionized.

SNAPSHOTS of the Piccadilly Arcade auction at Larz Anderson house, with La Maxwell as auctioneer: The billfold donated by Queen Elizabeth going to William Elmslie, of the British Embassy . . . Mrs. Truxton Beale ending up with a train from one of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's dresses, which she had worn at every court of Europe . . . the Luxembourg envoy, Hugues LeGallis, buying a Chinese screen . . . Mrs. Shaw Parker outbidding everyone on a little Queen Anne lowboy, given by an anonymous donor . . . Mrs. Patrick Hill walking home later with the cash box into which were stuffed bills totaling some $2,000 . . . Winthrop Crane giving his "hank of hair"—a piece of the beard of King George III—to Lady Latham. She accompanied him to the auction and asked him to buy it for her. He describes it as being tied with tiny ribbon and looking "just like a fishing fly."

A FORMER Chilean Ambassador here, Manuel Trucco, will return for a visit early this summer. His daughter, Mrs. Robert Knowlton, wife of a Washington newspaperman, is delighted at the prospect of her first family reunion in three years. One of her sisters, Senora Fernando Illanez, the former Graciela Trucco, also will be in New York shortly. She married a Chilean diplomat at a big wedding at the Embassy here several years ago, and he has just been transferred from Chile to the Manhattan consulate. The third Trucco sister, Marta, will accompany her father to the United States. Their brother, Manuel, jr., and his young wife recently came up from South America, and the former is working for a nitrate company in New York.

Mrs. Sidney Lee will have as visitors next weekend her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Carrere, of New York. Mrs. Carrere will arrive on Wednesday and her husband will join her a day or so later. They will stay at Mrs. Lee's attractive home in Georgetown. Mrs. Carrere's other sister is Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mrs. Caleb Motz Gives Luncheon For Mrs. Berry

Mrs. Eustis Gives Dinner for Balsans

Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis entertained at a dinner party last night in honor of Col. and Mrs. Jacques Balsan, who arrived here on Wednesday, to be the guests of Mrs. Arthur Fowler for several days.

Mrs. Fowler will entertain at a dinner party this evening for her guests.

Miss Stapleton, Fiance Feted At Dinner Dance

Toasts to the bride, and a special song called "Stellita," which Sidney wrote in her honor, featured the dinner dance given last night for Miss Stellita Stapleton and her fiance, George Renchard. The party took place at the Sulgrave Club and was attended by 115 friends of the young couple.

Earlier in the day Arthur Vandenberg, jr., entertained the out-of-town guests at luncheon in the Senate Restaurant. Miss Eleanor Meem feted the couple at cocktails later in the day. Mrs. George Renchard, of Detroit, mother of the prospective bridegroom, will give a luncheon for the bridal party today at the Chevy Chase Club and tonight Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton will give a dinner. The wedding is scheduled for tomorrow at 12:30 at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Guests at the dinner dance were seated at four large tables placed in the Sulgrave Club ballroom and the little room adjoining. Miss Stapleton presided over the one where her wedding party sat; Mrs. Hamilton headed another, and Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton was hostess at a third. The bridal table was decorated entirely with white Easter lilies, and these flowers with white roses centered the other tables.

The guest of honor wore a becoming smoke pink gown, embroidered with roses and finished off with a deep pink scarf and green belt. An orchid and green note was furnished by her handsome necklace and bracelets of emeralds. Mrs. Hamilton was in soft blue marquisette with a close fitting bodice and full skirt.

Besides members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests, those present included Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler, Miss Emily Davis, Kent Legg, Middleton Train, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Miss Eleanor Flood, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton, Miss Dolly Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kauffmann, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Clarence Hewes and Arthur Bradley Campbell.

Food Will Help Beat Axis, Fellowship Told

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The question of feeding the occupied countries of Europe is as much strategic as humanitarian, in the opinion of Dr. Karl Evang, surgeon general of public health in Norway before and immediately following the German invasion.

Dr. Evang, who left Norway with King Haakon and members of the Norwegian government now in England, now is in this country on a government mission, yesterday addressed the World Fellowship luncheon at the Y. W. C. A.

The people of Norway and of the other democracies of Europe regarded as "conquered," are still giving united resistance to the Germans, said Dr. Evang, and they need support from America in the form of food supplies. He advocated the working out of a plan to send such help in the way that it could best be gotten to each country.

A wholesale plan for feeding Europe is impracticable, he asserted. Each country's problem must be met individually. Supplies must be sent in limited quantities, he said, so that, "even if the Nazi's should be stupid enough to seize them, it would be of no benefit to them—they would only lose another platform for their propaganda.

Dr. Evang stated he believed the Germans would give guarantees insuring that the food would go to the civilian populations. Such relief would sustain the democratic peoples in their united front against the invaders, he asserted.

"Do you think we who have seen the Germans invade our country and rule it by terror, would be in favor of anything to help the Germans?" Dr. Evang asked.

The people look to the United States for supplies they know are available here, he declared. They place no blame on England, for they know Great Britain is in a fierce struggle and that her victory will be theirs. The situation is acute in some parts of Norway, he said, and from 75,000 to 100,000 tons of wheat is needed.

He described the fearlessness with which men, women and children in Norway are now resisting the Nazis. The loss of property, job, and of life, does not deter them, he said. From the beginning they have proved that the people of democracies are strong, not weak, he pointed out. Their contact with the Germans has replaced their hope for ultimate victory, with firm conviction that it will come, he declared.

They have witnessed the breaking down of Nazi morale before the presence of a free people. On several occasions, Nazi troops have been ordered back to Germany because of the weakening of their morale through contact with the independent Norwegians, he said. "How could anybody think that these Germans could win the war or rule the world" the Norwegians ask after knowing them. They have seen proof that the Nazi system is so weak it can only live on isolation, declared Dr. Evang, predicting that the occupation of democratic countries would be a powerful factor in dissolving the illusion of Nazi strength.

Dr. Evang's wife, who escaped from Norway a few months ago, brought first-hand accounts of Nazi terrorism, he said, but the Norwegians are continuing sabotage, passive resistance and summary dealing with traitors they find within their ranks despite increasingly harsh Nazi measures used against them.

Dr. Evang was introduced by Mrs. William S. Culbertson, chairman of the World Fellowship Committee. Another honor guest at the luncheon was Aage Bryn, wife of the First Secretary of the Norwegian Legation.

Colonials Hear Earlene White

Miss Earlene White, Senate postmistress and honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, yesterday addressed the luncheon of the Colonial Dames of the Seventeenth Century, given at the Hotel Mayflower in connection with their annual meeting. Mrs. Frank Morrison, organizing president of the Washington group, presided, and Mrs. John S. Adams, of Dublin, Ga., new president general, was an honor guest.

"The whole world needs America, and America is just Americans," said Miss White. "Each of us has his own job to do."

Answernig the question, "What can one person do?" Miss White pointed out that public opinion was formed of individual opinions and that one duty of individual Americans was to contribute opinion based on facts, not propaganda —"on what you believe and what you know, not what you have heard and what 'they say.'"

Pages' Ball Is Brilliant D. A. R. Climax

White-gowned pages of the fiftieth Continental Congress of Daughters of the American Revolution proved last night they could dance as well as run errands. The occasion was the annual pages' ball in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom, one of the most brilliant events of the congress week.

The girls, after four days of strenuous "paging" at a record-breaking convention, had lost none of their enthusiasm for a party of their own. They arrived with their escorts at 10:30 after the close of the program at Constitution Hall.

Mrs. William M. Carrigan, of Washington, chairman of the ball committee, headed the receiving line in which were vice chairmen of her committee. She wore a gown of black lace with a bouffant skirt held in below the hips by a wide band of grosgrain ribbon. The same ribbon also formed the shoulder straps.

Lieut. Comdr. William F. Bullis, chairman of the floor committee, made the presentations. Others in line were Miss Martha Morris, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio; Miss Elizabeth Cherier, of Alexandria; Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Mrs. James Thornton, of Corning, N. Y., and Miss Thelma LaBar Brown, of Olean, N. Y.

Other members of the committee, who assisted as hostesses at the door, included Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, Mrs. Willard Hart, Mrs. Lawrence M. Brown, Mrs. Catherine Birney Strong, Mrs. Sterling P. Eagleton, all of the District; Mrs. James W. Pierce, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Mary Jane Stanley, of Laurel, Md.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, and members of her cabinet arrived about 11:30, after the election returns had been announced at the Congress session. Preceded by four members of the floor committee as color guards, Miss Morris, carrying the American flag, and Miss Brown, carrying the D. A. R. flag, the president general was escorted to her box by Commander Bullis. She was followed by Mrs. Carrigan, escorted by Mr. Corrigan and members of the national board. Mrs. Robert's gown was of flesh-colored chiffon embroidered in a design of pearl sequins.

Miss Lucille Duxbury, daughter of Mrs. Leland S. Duxbury, of Minneapolis, historian general, acted as one of Mrs. Robert's personal pages.

Members of the floor committee in addition to Commander Bullis: Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Rear Admiral B. Harrison Lingo, Charles S. Schermerhorn, Charles C. Haig, William M. Carrigan, Willard Hart, Lawrence Brown, Sterling P. Eagleton, James W. Pierce, Joseph Keller, Lieut. Barry Fox, James Thornton, Paul Jones, Lieut. John I. Dean, Maj. E. F. Gillespie, Maj. VERMONT SOCIETY—The annual "sugar-on-snow" party of the Vermont State Society has been set for Friday night, April 23, and will be held at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K Streets.

The guest of honor and principal speaker of the evening will be Robert Lincoln O'Brien, former editor of the Boston Herald and former chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, who always spends part of the summer in Vermont. A resolution adopted by the Legislature of Texas congratulating Vermont on the 150th anniversary of its admission to the Union and presented in the United States Senate by Senator Warren R. Austin, will be read by A. A. Morrissette. Ezra Brainerd, jr., moderator of the association, will preside, and officers for the coming year will be chosen.

The committee in charge of the festival includes Mrs. Mable Miles Peirce, Miss Ann Berwin, Mrs. Merle H. Davis, Mrs. Albert E. Dieterich, Mrs. Albert G. Dodge, Miss Kathryn B. Donahue, Mrs. Frank E. Hickey, Mrs. W. W. Husband, Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel J. Peet, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Peirce, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer B. Rose, Mrs. Frederic I. Swift, Mrs. Charles A. Webb and Edmund A. Freeman.

At this time of year up in Vermont the sweet sap gathered from some 5,000,000 maple trees is being "boiled down," and if the season turns out to be a normal one about 10,000,000 pounds of maple syrup will be produced, some of which will be further boiled into sugar. "Sugarin' off" parties are being held everywhere in the State, either in the woods or under cover, and Vermonters in every par of the country celebrate the sugar season in the same fashion. In the home State real snow on which to wax the boiling sugar can still be found in the woods, but in Washington shaved ice is necessarily substituted. In addition to the sugar, which may be waxed or stirred down, according to individual tastes, unsweetened doughnuts, hot biscuits, sour pickles and Vermont sage cheese will be on the bill of fare at the coming party.

Benefit Party Tonight

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace heads the list of patronesses for the play, "Family Portrait," which is sponsored by the Connecticut College Alumnae Association as its annual benefit. The play will be presented by the King Smith Players at the King Smith Play House tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Where There's A Will, There's A Weigh

Chicago, April 17 (AP).—Paul Fritz, 22, ate his way into the Navy today. This morning he was 6 pounds under the 156 minimum for a 6-foot-2-inch man.

This afternoon he was back with six bananas, a large steak, six slices of bread, three potatoes, two desserts and several glasses of water under his belt. The scale registered 156.

Selectee Gets Personal Service

Henry T. Clark, jr., 23-year-old chief clerk to the Rockville (Md.) Selective Service Board, revealed yesterday he had sent himself a questionnaire at his home in Brookeville. He expects to summon himself for a physical examination within two weeks and probably will order himself to report for induction in May or June.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Shifting of Reserves In Civil Jobs on Way

There are several hundred Reserve officers on active duty who have been assigned to civilian jobs in the Federal service. During the next few months, however, a large number of the Reservists, chiefly those who have had tactical training, will be reassigned to military units. Selective Service headquarters will be hit hardest by such a move. It has only a handful of employes whose salary are more than $2,000 who aren't Army officers.

Frederick W. Osborn, chairman of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation, stands an excellent chance to be appointed director of the Selective Service System. He's probably the tallest Federal employe—he's 6 feet 8. Osborn is a dollar-a-year man, a New Yorker, and an old friend of President Roosevelt. He helped to draft Selective Service rules and regulations and is a close friend of Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director, who is also mentioned for the job.

A group of Minnesotans—probably politicians—have demanded the ouster of 65 employes of Farm Credit Administration on charges of political disloyalty. Agriculture says it will look into the charges. . . . Before he took over the old Bureau of Fisheries, Secretary Ickes said the only thing he knew about salmon was that it came in cans. . . . U. F. W. A.'s Federal Security local claims that only 9 per cent of the employes favor the 9:15 starting hour under the staggered system. It's trying to get an earlier starting hour, if only for the summer. Iowa State Society will dance tomorrow night at the Shoreham.

The quartermaster general of the War Department probably will be assigned the new District Building, if it's turned over to Uncle Sam. United States negotiations for the old District Building struck a snag when it was discovered that 50 per cent of the sale price had to be paid to the Federal Government. It seems that Uncle Sam had put up half the cost. . . . REA is celebrating its sixth birthday with a banquet and dance tonight at the Hotel Washington. . . . The annual Government Employes Table Tennis Tournament will be held Saturday at the Columbia Table Tennis Courts.

Thomas Shoemaker, deputy commissioner in charge of the legal branch, is a good bet to be appointed general counsel of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Ralph Seward would have been appointed had he not been made secretary of the National Mediation Board. . . . CAA has a new defender on Capitol Hill. He's Representative Anderson, of New Mexico, who says it's "untenable" to suggest that "to move the CAA down one corridor and around a corner in the Department of Commerce Building will cause airplanes to fall."

Agriculture Secretary Wickard has cracked down on employes who have been active in farm organizations. He has forbade his employes to hold offices or to participate actively in any farm organization. He approves of farm organizations, but not for his employes. Honorary memberships apparently are O. K. The American Farm Bureau Federation has often been accused of controling a large bloc of Agriculture jobs. The secretary's order should clear the air on that point. But the Administration doesn't feel kindly toward the federation after it attempted to have the department reorganized and decentralized. The attempt fizzled and now the federation wants to make peace.

A. U. F. W. A. delegation yesterday conferred with Civil Service Chairman Harry B. Mitchell and John A. Overholt on formation of the new appeals board to dispose of employe grievances over efficiency ratings. The commission plans to appoint permanent chairmen in each department. The union insisted that the chairmen be selected by the unions and the departments. The commission plans to hold elections in each department to allow the employes themselves to select employe representatives on the board. The union wants its own representative on the board when one of its members is involved. The commission agreed to a union request to allow union representatives to present a member's case before a board. The delegation consisted of William Plunkett, Oscar Witmer, Morton Stavis and Wayne Ball.

Vast Federal Office Plan Weighed

'Eastern Rectangle' Project Considered by Park Commission as Continuation of Mall

Development of an "eastern rectangle," a Federal building project that would dwarf the "downtown triangle," was taken under consideration yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The scheme provides that the Government shall take over all land lying between Capitol Hill and the Anacostia River, bounded by B Street Northeast on the north and B Street Southeast on the south, and dedicate the huge tract to Federal buildings.

Formulated by Jay Downer and Gilmore D. Clarke, consultants, the plan elicited much praise and no objections at yesterday's meeting of the commission, said Thomas S. Settle, secretary. He said it has been referred to the coordinating committee for further study.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, were among those who expressed approval, said Settle.

Most Ambitious Plan

The Downer-Clarke scheme calls for closing of A Streets, both Northeast and Southeast, for their full length; widening of East Capitol and the two B Streets to 240 feet, and acquisition by the Government of virtually all privately owned property in the "eastern rectangle" which would be created.

Ever since 1928—and at various intervals before that—transformation of the East Capitol Street area into a public building section has been considered. The Downer-Clarke idea is the most ambitious of any that have been offered.

Clarke is chairman of the Fine Arts Commission and approval of the plan by that body would not be unlikely.

Emphasizing the acute shortage of Federal office space in Washington, Downer said that 2,500,000 square feet could be provided by "eastern rectangle" buildings. At present, the Government is obliged to rent approximately 5,000,000 feet at an annual aggregate rental of nearly $4,000,000.

Financing Not Weighed

According to Settle, financial implications of the plan—what it would cost to buy the ground and what the buildings would cost—were not discussed by the commission.

The proposed rectangle would be in effect, a continuation of the Mall, which extends between Washington Monument and the Capitol. Whereas the Mall, however, is an open vista, the rectangle would be a building tract.

Taking up other matters yesterday, the commission announced acquisition of the 11½ more acres for Oxon Run Parkway, approved plans of the Public Roads Administration for construction of a new Lee Boulevard connection to serve the Navy Department Building being erected in Arlington, and approved transfer of the McMillan statue from McMillan Reservoir to the Mall.

Takoma Red Cross Honors Blind Worker on Birthday

RECEIVES REWARD ON BIRTHDAY—Mrs. Grace Thompson (left), sightless volunteer worker of the Takoma Park branch of the District Red Cross, receives from Mrs. Albert F. Lingle, branch chairman, a braille corps uniform and pin for her ten years of volunteer service. The presentation was made on Mrs. Thompson's birthday anniversary

Mrs. Grace V. Thompson, 509 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., blinded since childhood, was honored at her birthday yesterday at the all-day meeting of the Takoma Park branch of the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross.

In recognition of her 10 years of volunteer service, the branch presented Mrs. Thompsson with a braille uniform and pin. Mrs. Albert F. Lingle, chairman of the branch made the presentation.

Eighty-six volunteers of the branch, meeting at the parish hall of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church on Maple Avenue witnessed the ceremony, which preceded a canteen luncheon and birthday party. Mrs. Thompson is recording secretary of the branch, keeping and reading her minutes in Braille.

Before the women left the hall after a day of sewing, knitting and making surgical dressings, Mrs. Thompson donned her new uniform, a white-collared dress of navy blue with two chevrons and two bars and a navy veil hanging from a white cap.

Otto S. Lund, manager of the District of Columbia Chapter, and Mrs. Florence McKay, vice chairman of volunteer services in the D. C. Chapter, honor guests at the luncheon, lauded Mrs. Thompson for her activities.

Mother of two sons and a daughter whom she has never seen, Mrs. Thompson considers her organization activities a hobby. She chose this because she said, "when my children are grown I don't want them sitting at home to hold my hand."

Not only is the blind woman active in Red Cross work, but she belongs to several other organizations which she has served in similar capacities. She is former president of the auxiliary to the Takoma Park Vounteer Fire Department which she also served as recording secretary for two years. She was also president of the auxiliary to William Redman Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Association of Workers for the Blind. Teaching a Sunday school class at the Takoma Park Baptist Church is another of Mrs. Thompson's activities.

"I have all the advantages anyone could have, plus a very remarkable husband," Mrs. Thompson said. Herbert Thompson, a World War Veteran, studied Braille at a school in Dijon, France. In this way he kept in correspondence with his blind sweetheart before their marriage.

Water, Water All Around But D. C. Is Dry

Washington's weather stayed true to tradition yesterday by remaining hot and dry, while the rest of the country was being deluged by thundershowers or driven to overcoats by snows and low temperatures.

Local showers, expected to break the heat wave in this area, failed to arrive as scheduled, after giving Frederick, Md., a heavy rain.

It was the eleventh consecutive rainless day for the District, an all-time record for the month of showers, and the abnormal midsummer temperature continued, with a high of 84.8 for the day. Meanwhile, in Boston, the Nats-Red Sox baseball game was called off because of rain and cold weather.

Charles L. Mitchell, Washington forecaster, predicted temperatures in the 80's for today and tomorrow, with conditions still favorable for hit-or-miss local showers. General rain, though, is due by Sunday, and Monday the mercury will take a curt dip.

Dr. Wood Opposes Sales Tax for D. C.

"Persistent united efforts" to perfect the District income tax were urged yesterday by Dr. Herbert Wood, tax specialist of the Internal Revenue Bureau, who opposed proposals for a local sales tax.

In a broadcast over Station WINX, Wood said the "income tax is the protector of the poor while the sales tax is their oppressor." He stated that nearly 85 cents out of each dollar of revenue from the income tax is paid by persons with incomes over $2,500 annually. This group would pay only 45 cents on the dollar in the case of a sales tax.

Women Told How to Speak For Defense

"Show me a leader and I'll show you a speaker," said Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, special assistant to Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of Work Projects Administration, at the opening of Mrs. Hugh Butler's "Basic Course in Practical Defense Speaking" at Pierce Hall yesterday.

Addressing an advance rally for the class yesterday, Mrs. Miller said: "Thousands of women in America today are asking, 'What can I do to assist in the total preparedness of our country?' My answer to them is to learn the facts and to prepare themselves to present those facts accurately, intelligently and forcefully to the people in their own communities."

America's military defense is only as strong as the people back of the line, said Mrs. Miller. "We know that people without strong convictions for democracy are vulnerable to every ism that comes along," she added.

Reasons behind the course, as stated by Mrs. Butler, who lives at 1559 Forty-fourth Street Northwest, are:

That people haven't yet thought through what they want to say; people haven't sufficient background for speaking on defense; that orators lack speech technique, and that defense speaking deals with new terminologies and new ideas "never before dealt with in the world of the past."

Among those suggesting ideas for speakers' study at the meeting yesterday were Dr. Julia L. Hahn, information service, Office of Education; Mrs. George Thorpe, representing the American Automobile Association; Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens, publicity committee, District Red Cross, and Dr. Florence Armstrong, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Pay $23,010 Poll Tax

A total of 15,340 persons has paid $23,010 poll taxes through March 31, according to County Treasurer John Locke Green. May 3 is the deadline for payment of the poll tax in order to participate in the August Democratic primary and general election in November, Green said.

Speed Urged In Building Projects

Defense Official Makes Radio Plea; Real Estate Boards' Head Also Speaks

Realtors and builders were urged yesterday by Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer to speed up home production. His plea was made in a national radio symposium broadcast from the Mayflower Hotel, in which Federal Housing Administrator Abner H. Ferguson and Philip W. Kniskern, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, also participated.

The defense housing head said real estate and construction men can help defense by prompt production, accurate information for analyses, fair appraisals, modernization of run-down properties, listing available rooms and departments, and maintenance of fair rental schedules.

Regarding the latter, he said, "No one wants rent-control legislation. It proved impractical in this country in the World War, and similar experiments in Canada right now are having their troubles. As most of you know, model legislation for rent control has been drawn up, and any abuse in the direction of exploitation is apt to be and should be dealt with summarily. Let's hope that a combination of patriotism and plain horse sense will keep rents fair."

Production Up 29 Per Cent

He said private and public enterprise are doing their work for defense housing well. For the first classification, he recounted that in the $3,000 to $5,000 field, during a recent seven months' period, production was up 29 per cent over the comparable period of the previous year for the country as a whole, and in some defense areas the increase was 150 to 200 per cent.

Reminding that insofar as possible, the Government is looking to private enterprise to supply the great bulk of new houses needed in the present emergency, Federal Housing Administrator Ferguson, said when the defense program was initiated stimulus to employment in expanding industry was quickly reflected in new home construction.

Kniskern Urges Action

In a request for immediate action along a sound plan providing defense housing, Kniskern pledged active cooperation of his organization. At a press conference preceding the symposium, he explained defense housing offered different problems in the cities and rural areas.

In the cities, he said, old housing is available and local real estate boards have a clear and definite picture of the amount of permanent housing that can be absorbed. In the country, however, there is no old housing and local realtors must decide as to the amount of new industry that will be permanent; as to the permanent housing that can be built without financially bankrupting the communities, and the amount of temporary housing the Government must furnish.

The symposium, sponsored by the national realtors' organization, took place at a special meeting of the Washington Real Estate Board. Simultaneous meetings were held by real estate boards throughout the country at which, following the radio program, speakers talked on the situation and its solution in their own areas.

No Streamlined Chairs For New D. C. Building

District officials who will occupy the new Municipal Center Building learned yesterday they must sacrifice a bit of their splendor in the interest of national defense.

There will be no streamlined aluminum chairs in the District headquarters building when it is opened for occupancy some time in June—although the Commissioners had ordered 641 at an estimated cost of $12,227.

Yesterday the Commissioners received word from the Office of Production Management that agencies housed in the new structure would have to get along without the shiny seating arrangements.

Aluminum, it was pointed out, is a metal much in demand at the moment for defense purposes.

HELEN FROELICH

Formal announcement will be made tomorrow of the engagement of Miss Helen Froelich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Froelich, of Gridley, Ill., to Rush D. Holt, former United States Senator from West Virginia.

Miss Froelich is an instructor in biology at National Park College, Forest Glen, Md. She attended Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and Northwestern University, from the latter of which she holds bachelor of arts and master of science degrees. She has done graduate work at the University of Missouri and the Marine Biogolical Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta Social Sorority.

Senator Holt, the son of the late Dr. Mathew S. Holt and Mrs. Lela D. Holt, of Weston, W. Va., served in the Senate from 1935 to 1941. He was only 29 years old when elected, and his oath-taking was delayed until he became 30.

Nominee For P. U. C. Under Fire

McCarran Denies President's Choice, Hankin, Is Qualified To Fill Position

President Roosevelt's nominee for District public utilities commissioner appears to lack "particular qualification for the job," Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday told the Senate District Committee.

McCarran is chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee considering the nomination of Gregory Hankin, Federal Power Commission attorney. In explaining to the District Committee, of which he is a member, his bill to repeal the legal requirement that utilities commissioners must not have voted outside the District for three years prior to taking office, McCarran declared:

"There isn't any more important office than that of public utilities commissioner. We have before us now a nominee for commissioner. Several weeks of study have failed to disclose that he has any particular qualification for the job. The record shows that he is capable and competent, but the work of public utilities commissioner is highly specialized."

With Chairman Reynolds and Senators Overton, McCarran, Bilbo, Burton and Capper attending the meeting, the committee favorably reported eight District bills. The most important of these was a House measure to require motorists convicted of reckless driving to carry insurance of financial responsibility. Existing law imposes the same requirement in event of conviction for drunk driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

The committee also approved measures to permit grade crossing of seldom used railroad spur lines; to authorize Freedmen's Hospital to accept gifts; to permit the police property clerk to determine ownership of recovered stolen goods; to allow Hans Jurgensen, jr., House tally clerk, to use Congressional auto tags; to permit the Red Cross to build a $75,000 building at St. Elizabeth's Hospital; to allow the Pennsylvania Railroad to underpass New York Avenue Northeast with a spur which would connect with freight unloading facilities to be built nearby, and a bill to give teacher retirement benefits to Charlotte E. Hunter.

The railroad bill was approved in executive session after O. S. Lewis, representing the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, protested the construction would duplicate B. & O. facilities.

Alfred D. Calvert, of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, charged that competition between the two roads has "blistered and destroyed" most of Northeast Washington.

Gomez Hurls Yankees to 9-4 Edge Over Macks

7-Hit Effort Launches Comeback

Victors Stage 7-Run Spree in 4th; Keller Collects Four Hits, Including Homer

By the Associated Press

Yankee Stadium, New York, April 17.—Vernon (Lefty) Gomez took a long stride forward on the comeback trail by holding the Philadelphia Athletics to seven hits as the Yankees pounded out a 9-to-4 decision here today.

Gomez gave up a run in the fourth on a triple by Frank Hayes followed by an outfield fly. In the sixth Bob Johnson homered into the right field stands. In the ninth four bingles scored two more runs. Gomez was hurt during the last frame when Sam Chapman's hit bounced off his spine, but he stuck to the finish. Porter Vaughn, a left-hander, started for the A's and pitched three scoreless innings before inept fielding and Yankee opportunism paved the way for a seven-run barrage in the fourth frame.

Charley Keller led the attack with four hits, including his first homer of the year. The Yankees revised their lineup and batting order, with Gerry Priddy playing his first big league game at second base, Joe Gordon at first, Buddy Rosar catching and Frenchy Bordagaray in right field, to put more right-handed punch in against a southpaw.

Greenberg To Visit Draft Board Today

By International News Service

Detroit, April 17.—Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers' slugging outfielder, will have a double date tomorrow when he returns home with the team.

His first will be with his draft board, before which he must appear at 10 a. m. The second will be in the afternoon when the Tigers play the Cleveland Indians.

The visit to the draft board may be a fateful one for the man who was adjudged the American League's most valuable player last year as it will decide whether he will be allowed to continue in baseball this year or must join up with the Nation's military forces.

He will undergo a complete physical examination by the draft board's medical advisory staff. The staff will either sustain or reverse the recommendation of a Florida doctor that Hank be deferred because of flat feet. In spite of the recommendation, the star player now is in Class 1-A, available for immediate service, with final decision resting on tomorrow's examination.

It was expected Hank would be inducted May 7 if the board declines to defer him.

Slight Injury Deters Colt In Training

Trainer Fitzsimmons Hopes to Have Son Of Sir Gallahad Ready for Preakness

By the Associated Press

New York, April 17.—Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' hopes of saddling his fourth Kentucky Derby winner on May 3 receiveda setback today when the veteran trainer just about gave up on having Bold Irishman ready for the $75,000 3-year-old classic.

The Irishman, winner of the 1940 Pimlico Futurity and son of route-breeding Sir Galahad III, injured himself in the hindquarters a week ago with the result "Mr. Fitz" had to let up on his training for several days. He's back in training now, but these few days of idleness interrupted the colt's schedule just when the veteran trainer had him about ready for a conditioning race.

"I don't know how he hurt himself," said Fitzsimmons. "Probably it was in his stall. The injury wasn't serious, but it was enough to break up his routine."

Fitzsimmons is not sure when the big colt will be ready for a prep race. His method of training calls for getting a horse ready and then running him at the first opportunity. He does hope, however, to have the Irishman in condition for the Preakness at Pimlico, May 10.

Fortunately, Mr. Fitz has King Cole in his stable for the Derby. Off the King's performance in the Paumonok at Jamaica last Saturday the trainer still has a good chance in the run for the roses. But it's no secret that Bold Irishman was the "big horse" of the stable.

The King ran the 6 furlongs of the Paumonok as if he might go the Derby route of a mile and quarter, but his breeding says no. Some experts think, however, he may be another Johnstown, Fitzsimmons' 1938 Derby winner.

Smith Blanks Chisox, 2 to 0, For Indians

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 17.—The Cleveland Indians' southpaw strategy worked effectively again today as Al Smith handed the Chicago White Sox their second consecutive shutout, 2 to 0, in a tight pitching duel with Thornton Lee.

The 32-year-old veteran scattered six hits, batted in one of his own runs and never was in serious trouble in the southpaw pitching battle as he helped the tribe capture the inaugural series, two games to one.

Smith, who became the Indians' No. 3 pitcher with 15 victories last season after the National League thought he was "washed up" and waived him to the minors, allowed two blows in only one inning. That was the second—after two men were out.

Allows Seven Hits

Lee allowed seven hits, but two were bunched in each of the first and fourth innings to give the tribe its runs.

Ken Keltner lined one of his two doubles against League Park's right-field wall and scored on Hal Trosky's single for the first tally. Beau Bell opened the fourth with a double high against the screen in right center and came home as Smith, with two out, singled off Dario Lodigiani's glove.

Smith emulated Southpaw Al Milnar's performance yesterday in strikeouts and bases on balls, fanning one and walking one. His shutout ran the Chisox's scoreless innings to 21. The Sox got two runs off Bob Feller in the sixth inning of Tuesday's opener and haven't threatened since.

The Tribe opens a three-game series at Detroit tomorrow with Jim Bagby, jr., slated to make his Cleveland American League debut against Tommy Bridges for the champion Tigers. The Indians landed Bagby from the Boston Red Sox last winter.

Nats to Send Chase Against Yanks Today

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

En Route to Washington, April 17.—An unhappy trainload of Nats, their losing streak broadened by travel, were moving back to Washington tonight. Tomorrow, in the friendlier confines of Griffith Stadium, the Washington athletes will be meeting up with the Yankees again, which is where they came into the 1941 pennant race, four horrible days ago.

They don't know for certain where their first victory is coming from, but they are sort of hopeful that it is reposing in the good left arm of Ken Chase, who'll sally forth for the battle against the Yankees tomorrow.

Indications are that Chase will be in there against young Ernie Bonham, who finished last season as the Yankees' best pitcher. The big righthander from Kansas City, like Chase, will be making his first start of the season.

Perhaps one of the reasons the Nats are not bringing a four-game losing streak back to Washington, merely a three-game chain of defeats, is because today's scheduled affair with the Red Sox was washed out by a morning rain. Until they are able to consolidate their pitching forces, the Nats departed willingly from the Fenway Park front.

No Relief From Relief Pitchers

In losing both of their games at Boston, the Nats had nightmarish experiences. They hit the ball hard yet still couldn't win. They wound up both games leading by three runs in the ninth inning and were scuttled by horrible relief pitching. Manager Bucky Harris is afraid to look at his bull pen these days for fear he'll weaken and call one of his relief pitchers into a game, which is tantamount to running up the white flag of surrender.

Exactly what Harris had feared happened to the Nats in Boston. His relief hurlers couldn't get anybody out; at least not many. The Nats' manager made a strong appeal to Owner Clark Griffith for some pitching help when he returned from the South and predicted just such a dire situation, and tomorrow morning when he confers with Griffith again he'll make his demands stronger. The evidence is on his side.

Three games after the start of the season, Harris finds that neither Dutch Leonard, Sid Hudson nor Walter Masterson are able to win, but he is not downcast by their performances. Hudson alone pitched a weak game, and Harris still retains confidence in him. With half decent relief pitching, his club would have won both Boston games impressively.

"Throw out our relief pitching and there are some pretty encouraging signs on our club" Harris was saying tonight. "In Boston, we

Sewell Gives Two Hits as Bucs Beat Cubs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 17.—Pittsburgh's Pirates gave Truett Sewell a five-run lead in the first inning today and then went on to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 2, behind the two-hit pitching of their ace right-hander.

The only Cub blows as the Bucs broke even in their abbreviated two-game series were Lou Novikoff's homer in the seventh and Lou Stringer's single in the fifth. Two errors, coupled with one of the five bases on balls issued by Sewell, gave the Cubs their other run in the ninth.

Vince DiMaggio's homer with the bases loaded in the first inning drove Vern Olsen from the mound and clinched victory for the Pirates. DiMaggio's homer followed two singles and two successive walks, the latter of which forced home the first Pittsburgh run. Rookie Paul Erickson then shut out the Bucs until the eighth when three singles helped score two more runs.

Samuel D. Riddle's War Hazard Wins At Narragansett

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., April 17.—A young horse and an old rider was a winning combination for Samuel D. Riddle at Narragansett Park today when the 3-year-old War Hazard, with Tommy Luther up, won the featured Albany Purse.

That daughter of Man o' War scored by a slim nose over Mrs. Nat Palumbo's Bit o' Green in the 6-furlong sprint for 3-year-old fillies. Luther rated his mount well back as Bit o' Green went out to set a fast pace.

War Hazard was taken outside of Bit o' Green through the far turn and the pair came into the home stretch side by side. War Hazard barely getting up at the wire.

E. E. Bennett's Meadow Dew was 4½ lengths back of Bit o' Green and only a neck in front of Lovely Dawn, owned by Weston W. Adams.

Freed of Assault Charges, Brooklyn Fan Goes to Game

By the Associated Press

New York, April 17.—That rabid Brooklyn baseball fan who mixed with Umpire George Magerkurth during a close game with the Reds last fall was freed of assault charges today—with the admonition that the ump is always right.

"When an umpire calls a strike, it's a strike," Magistrate Joseph D'Andrea told Frank Gernano, 21, 5 feet 5 and 160. "You cannot substitute your opinion for his. The umpire is the gentleman in charge of the ball game."

The magistrate then asked "Maje," 6 feet 4 and 210, if he were going to "call a strike" on Gernano.

"No, no strike," said Maje, who reputedly was laid low by one of Gernano's roundhouse rights. "I've got a boy of my own."

With the case thus dismissed, Gernano headed straight for Ebbets Field—to yell for the Dodgers against the Giants.

Lewis Answers Call

Boston, April 17.—Thus far, the impact of the Army draft has hit only two big league clubs hard, but in their cases the blows have been pretty brutal. While the richer teams have been escaping the heavy hand of the Selective Service Law, the lowly Nats and Phils have been macerated. The Phils lost their only big league pitcher—Hugh Mulcahy—and now Outfielder Joe Marty is in Class 1A—and the Nats will surrender Buddy Lewis to the Army in a couple of weeks.

POVICH

If it had been a plot to wreck the Nats, it could not have been more diabolically conceived. Washington's chances of getting out of the second division may well be blighted by the luck of the Selective Service draw that is taking Lewis from the lineup in the first month of the season. On a team that boasted little slug, Lewis was the only guy who fitted the role of clean-up hitter, and since the start of the season he has been doing a job of it. The job will flatter whoever gets it when Lewis leaves.

Not only will Bucky Harris miss Lewis' valuable punch, but his infield plans are entirely scrambled. If he restores Cecil Travis to third base, he will be sacrificing Travis' defensive ability at shortstop. If Jimmy Bloodworth is stationed at third base, there is no guarantee that the 37-year-old Buddy Myer is equal to regular duty at second base. If Jimmy Pofahl is maneuvered into the infield lineup, Harris loses, both defensively and offensively.

Lewis Was One of Two .300 Hitters

In his plight, it is painful for Harris to recall that Lewis last season was one of the only two .300 hitters on his club. The other is, of course, Cecil Travis. Even while batting second and third, Lewis was a leader in driving in runs, and where the runs are coming from now, Harris scarcely knows.

Clark Griffith is now relieved, of course, from paying Lewis the $13,000 salary his 1941 contract called for, but he would rather have the worry of paying Lewis the dough. Lewis' presence in the Army threatens to cost the Nats' owner a lot of money—perhaps as much as $100,000. That is the difference between the season's gate receipts for a first-division Washington team and a second-division club, and without Lewis the Nats can virtually kiss off their first division ideas, barring a miraculous replacement.

If Griffith could have foreseen ten months ago the state of current world affairs, he could have unloaded Lewis ot the Detroit Tigers at a handsome price. Last June, just before the trading deadline, the rich Detroit club offered Griffith $100,000 for Lewis. The Tigers were panicky and wanted to bolster both their infield and outfield, and knew that Lewis would fit into either department. But Griffith valued Lewis at more than that figure and turned the offer down. The Tigers narrowly escaped buying a $100,000 player for the United States Army.

In any event, Lewis' induction into the Army is a tough blow to Griffith. The third baseman may rejoin the club next year barring the outbreak of hostilities, and he would still fit nicely into the Washington lineup. A year out of baseball, doing Army work, would not handicap Lewis' baseball future, because he could quickly regain all the niceties of touch that make big leaguers. But it would mean that Griffith would have one year less of service from his player, and that is a considerable rap.

Rich Teams Escaping the Draft

The irony of it is that while clubs like the Nats and Phils, who are ill able to lose key players, have been taking the raps, the richer teams like the Tigers and Yankees are still unscathed by the draft. The Yankees, who have an able shortstop on the bench in Frank Crosetti, had the luck to see Phil Rizzuto win deferment, and the Tigers still hold out high hopes that Hank Greenberg's flat feet will keep him out of the Army.

It was Griffith who, during the last World War, won reprieves from the draft for all big leaguers by his personal appeal to Secretary of War Newton Baker. Griffith suggested, and his recommendation was approved, that in lieu of being called into Army camps, the players drill regularly at the ball parks under the supervision of Army officers. The Nats' owner's plan enabled baseball to operate during the war years. At this time, with the country not at war with anybody—yet—Griffith is the first owner in his league to lose a player in the draft.

THOUGHTS WHILE STALLING—A week ago a fellow would have been committed to the ward for violent cases if he had been crazy enough to predict that such pitchers as Bob Feller, Dutch Leonard, Red Ruffing, Sid Hudson, Buck Newsom, Paul Derringer and Kirby Higbe would be knocked out of the box in their first start of the season. But that's what happened—to all of 'em.

Ex-Bullfighter Files Suit Against Van Lingle Mungo

New York, April 17.—Van Lingle Mungo, the temperamental Brooklyn Dodger pitcher, was mighty fast on the mound in the one inning he pitched against the Giants this afternoon but not so speedy that Sheriff James Mangano couldn't serve him with an arrest order.

At the bottom of Mungo's latest trouble was a merry evening he spent in Havana about five weeks ago, in which a Rhumba dancer, the hostess at the Nacional Hotel, and the dancer's husband were involved. Today the husband, former bullfighter Francisco Colloda Carreno, filed suit for $20,000 against the pitcher in Supreme Court here.

Carreno formerly danced at the Nacional with his wife and partner, Christina, from whom he is now estranged. At dawn on March 10, he claims, he burst into the bedroom of an entertainer at the hotel to find Mungo, his wife, and the entertainer. There was a brief scuffle, and soon afterward Mungo left by plane.

The arrest order carried a stipulation that Mungo would be jailed unless he provided $500 bail. A representative of the Dodger's business office did some fast work getting the money together and satisfied the sheriff.

Mungo, now headed for Boston with his team, has 20 days to answer Carreno's charges.

First Ladies' Day Scheduled Today At Griffith Stadium

The ladies, Lor' bless 'em, have a special invitation to watch the Nats try and win their first American League game since last September today. It's Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium.

President Clark Griffith, in announcing his decision to make today the first Ladies' Day of the year, said he was certain a little feminine vocal assistance would help his athletes break the three-game losing streak they have run up so far this year.

Rained out in Boston yesterday after absorbing two losses in Beantown, the Nats today face the New York Yankees for the second time. The game will be the first of two with the 1939 champions, after which it'll be another series with the Red Sox, this one here.

Hoyas' Diamond Streak Snaps, Michigan Takes 7-6 Decision

9th-Inning Comeback Falls Short

Dieckelman Blasted; Defense Is Poor as G. U. Loses 1st Game In Four 1941 Starts

Georgetown University nine, touted as one of the best in Hoya history and hopeful of duplicating the undefeated records of several teams in the past, came a cropper in its fourth start of the season yesterday when Michigan University eked out a 7-6 judgment on Medical Field.

Victors over Harvard, Cornell and Syracuse in previous games, the Hoyas tasted their first defeat as the combined result of Pitcher Dick Dieckelman's over-generosity with hits and runs in his five-inning stint and their own fielding lapses.

They put on a brilliant rally in the latter part of hostilities, ending up with two runs in the last inning, but couldn't overcome the 7-2 edge Dieckelman had staked the invaders in the first five frames.

After Vinnie Powers had relieved Dieckelman and shut out the Wolverines for four innings, the Hoyas finally got into competition in the last half of the ninth when they loaded the bases with none out and drove home two runs, leaving them a 7-6 deficit. Stan Wnek, pinch hitter, was still on first, but that was as far as he got as Neil Muir, the last of four Michigan hurlers, retired the side.

Dog Show Deadline Set Tomorrow

If you have not already entered your dog for the Old Dominion Kennel Club Show, to be held April 26 at the Municipal Ball Park Grounds, Alexandria, Va., do so today and avoid tomorrow's rush. Saturday is the last date on which entries may be accepted. A total of more than a thousand dogs is expected and, as there are special classes for locally owned dogs, with the Gordon Hittenmark silver cups as trophies, a record turnout of entries from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia is anticipated.

Club members will be on duty all today and tomorrow at Schmid's Pet Shop, 712 Twelfth Street Northwest, to assist in making out blanks and answer questions. They emphasize that, to be enetered, a dog need not be registered or have his pedigree known. He must be pure-bred and that is all.

On sale until tomorrow evening are the half-price advance tickets, which admit two to the grounds for $1 admission price the day of the show. These 50-cent tickets are at pet shops and veterinarians' offices, or may be obtained from any club member. Four specialty clubs cooperating with Old Dominion also have supplies of half-price tickets. They are the Capital City Cocker Club, Harry Lustine, Woodley 5415, publicity chairman; the Washington Bulldog Club, John O. Gunn, Wisconsin 9037, secretary; the Potomac Boxer Club, Gordon Barton, publicity chairman, Emerson 7103; the Capital Dog Training Club, Harvey Brown, Warfield 1046. Secretary of Old Dominion is Mrs. Mary K. Powell, Route 1, Upper Marlboro, Md., Hillside 0778-J.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Sportin' Around

New York, April 17.—Joe Louis has been fighting so much of late because he needs the cash. He is "land poor," having sunk all of his ring earnings into his Michigan dude ranch. If he fights four times out of doors this summer, as he plans, three will be for Uncle Mike (Jacobs) and the other will be for Uncle Sam (taxes). . . . You can tell the war's on by the "nationality" of the horses now stabled at Hollywood Park: 25 Argentinos, nine British, three Chilean, four French, two Irish and two Uruguayan. . . . Estimates as to how many "first balls" Roosevelt has thrown out overlooked his 1917 first ball, Ted Roberts, a Brooklyn fan, reminds me. Mr. Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy, went in as a relief pitcher that day for Woodrow Wilson. . . . The majors now have Paul, Dizzy, Chubby and Jimmy Dean, of the Giants, Cubs, A's and Senators, respectively. Paul, Diz and Jimmy think lefthanded but Chubby only throws that-a way-a.

CONSIDINE

One of the jockeys killed last year was a marajuana smoker, yet the Jockey Club licensed him to race here even after it had been told by Government men that the kid was cokey. . . . Good gosh, what'll happen to the Phillies' pennant drive if the draft gets Joe Marty! The club was tied for first place in the National League the night the season opened, by virtue of its stirring opening day victory, but can it stand that dizzy pace without Marty? . . . Ned Irish resigns today as publicity man for Tim Mara's New York football Giants, a job he has held since the days when Mara gave out 5,000 passes a week and Irish practically had to beg fans to attend the games. . . . Horton Smith says that all this stuff about conflicting styles in golf is the bunk—that the good boys all hit the ball alike, in that 12-inch are near the point of contact.

McCarthy Touchy on Gordon Setup

Lou Gehrig's name was on many lips at the Yankee opener . . . Joe McCarthy is getting quite touchy about reporters who ask him if he thinks Joe Gordon will make the grade as a first baseman . . . Anvil Andy Farkas is working in the circulation department of The Washington Post . . . Many old grand circuit trotting owners will be getting their first taste of streamlined harness racing (without repetitious heats) when they bring their charges to Roosevelt raceway next month . . . required reading: The current magazine pieces on the Cleveland Indians uprising by Gordon Cobbledick and the one on Clayton Heafner by Jake Wade . . . Dick Griffin, Texas promoter, wants Mike Jacobs to let him have Lew Jenkins for a title fight this summer in Dallas, and Mike would be a chump not to let Lew go, for Dallas is red hot for a sight of Lew.

Seven of the most discussed pitchers in the business—Feller, Newsom, Derringer, Higbe, Hudson, Leonard and Wyatt—blew their opening assignments. . . . Will Harridge's preseason statement on the American League pennant race should be framed in every journalism class in the country as the supreme sample of free-style hedging. Good old Will made them all sound so improved that nothing less than an eight-club dead-heat will satisfy us. . . . Arnold Anderson, Washington's rookie pitcher who outscrambled 50-odd Senators and Yankees and came up, battered but triumphant, with the ball President Roosevelt threw out, had just come from his father's funeral. A couple of million dollars worth of baseball talent risked permanent injury in the spike-brandishing scramble for the President's pitch.

Roosevelt's Ball Game Guard Biggest

Roosevelt had his biggest guard, at the baseball opener—Secret Service men, countless D. C. cops and many F. B. I. men, upstairs and down. There was even a guard under the grandstands. Accredited cameramen only were permitted on the field near his box, and for the first time there were no women in his party. On the way out of the park, Secret Service men rimmed the runningboards of his big open car. . . . If the Nazis give us another chance to forward suggestions on how they can improve themselves, via collect cable, we're going to send Jack Lait's baseball editorial in last Monday's Mirror. . . . The two most disappointing racing cars in recent speedway history will get to the starting line, finally, this year. They are the rear-engined four-wheel drive buggies built in 1938 at a cost of $100,000 by Harry Miller. Eddie Offutt, a handy guy with a wrench, has coaxed one of them to average 143 M. P. H. for 500 miles, over the Bonneville Salt Flats.

Seventeen colts are eligible to take a crack at racing's Triple Crown this year. The Triple Crown (Derby, Preakness and Belmont) has been won by only four horses, Sir Barton in 1919, Gallant Fox in 1930, Omaha in 1935 and War Admiral in 1937. Chief among the 1941 eligibles for this tough three-tiered test are Whilaway, Attention and Monday Lunch, which leads one to suspect that there will be no addition to Triple Crown fame this year. . . . My Dry Valley, Moab, Utah, Reader, Walter Peredniis, wants to know if Louis ever lost a title fight. Nope, though Max Marek beat him in the finals of an amateur tournament. Okay Moab?

Garvins Drill

Garvins Grill ten, of the Sport Center League, will hold a practice session Sunday on the Twenty-first Street and Constitution Avenue field at 11 a. m. Jim Kiraly, stellar hurler, has been signed to play with the Grillmen this season.

Buddy Baer, Louis Battle Set May 23

Apparently convinced that one night and one day is sufficient time in which to change Griffith Stadium from a park into a fight stadium, President Clark Griffith of the Nats yesterday signed a contract with New York's promoter, Mike Jacobs, for a 15-round title bout May 23 between Joe Louis and Buddy Baer.

At first adverse to the scrap because his Nats play Cleveland here May 22, Griffith agreed to the affair after considerable pressure from the New York fistic mogul.

The bout, which may be shifted to May 24 in case of bad weather, will not interfere with the proposed Billy Conn-Louis fight in June, according to Jacobs in an earlier interview. The terms, according to Jacobs, will be 40 per cent for Louis and 17½ per cent for the younger Baer, who defeated Tony Galento in a heavyweight feature here a few weeks ago.

Terps Bow To W.-L., 7-4

Maryland's skidding ball team sank to its seventh loss in nine games yesterday as the Washington and Lee Generals overcame a two-run lead and closed with a 7-4 victory.

After Maryland's Leib McDonald blasted a homer into deep center that sent Whipp, Terp left fielder, across the place ahead of him the Old Liners fell before a four-run attack in the sixth inning.

Again in the second stanza the Old Liners tallied when Whipp walked and stole second. Leib McDonald then rapped a single into short left field to score the Maryland outfielder.

Green Hornet Is Arena Rassle Victor

That mysterious character, the Green Hornet, defeated Milo Steinborn, the Memphis strong man, in the feature wrestling bout at Turner's Arena last night. The end came in 25 minutes, and with appalling suddenness to some 1,500 fans who had been screaming for Milo to distribute dismembered portions of the Hornet torso amongst the crowd.

Up until that time Steinborn and the Hornet were battling on even terms, and had managed to keep Referee Casey Berger extremely busy breaking up the dirty work. Hornet, still inspired with the Easter spirit, continually employed the rabbit-punch treatment while Steinborn was doing some smacking of his own. After 20 minutes of brawling, Milo developed an overwhelming curiosity as to what the Hornet really looked like and he endeavored to rip off the green hood. Enraged, the Hornet put some body slams on Steinborn, who retaliated in like manner and chuncked the masked one out of the ring.

As Hornet climbed back up to the ringside Milo embraced him with a bear hug and attempted to press the voluminous green trunks—while the Hornet was still in 'em: Hornet threw a punch that flattened Steinborn, and Hornet leaped through the ropes to pin the still-prostrate Steinborn with a body press.

Plummer Disqualified

Lou Plummer, as good a showman as ever worked these parts, was disqualified twice in his semi-final go against Len Macaluso. Just five minutes after the bout started Macaluso butted Lou through the ropes into the audience where some elfin spirit proceeded to apply a lighted cigarette to Plummer's back. Justly indignant, Lou was begging a bespectacled gent to put up his dukes, and meanwhile Referee Berger counted him out.

Fred (Spider) Grobmier defeated fat Herbie Freeman in 12 minutes with a body scissors.

A newcomer, Leo Numa, won over Irascible Chief White Feather in 18 minutes with a body press. Numa, a handsome pug, is in real life Axel Anderson, a former all-Pacific Coast fullback from University of Washington.

Maurice La Chappelle, of France, took the opener from Jim Austeri in 20:15 with a tackle and half-cradle.

Cham Cotton Tops Catholic Pin Scores

The Washington Catholic boys at Queen Pin were paced by Cham Cotton's 144-378 for his Our Lady of Victory quintet which enabled his boys to win high team set with a 1,634 count, taking the odd game from St. Joseph's as well. Henry Kaboskey's 140-372 aided his St. Peter's No. 1 lads in taking two out of three from St. Dominick's. St. Francis Xavier won high team game after knocking over 600 pins. St. Peter's No. 1 leads the league with 48-31.

INTER-SORORITY

Pegge Miller, Chi Sigma No. 3, had 120 to take high game honors in the Inter-Sorority League at Brookland while Edit Burns, Alpha Zeta Beta No. 1, counted 321 to win high set. The Chi Sigma No. 1 girls rolled 511 and 1,491 to win team highs. Alpha Zeta Beta No. 1 is still out in front.

ICE PALACE

Mary Frownfelter, Robins, and Ida McIntosh, Owls, led the Connecticut Avenue Ladies League at the Ice Palace with individual highs of 131 and 326 with the latter's count taking her team to a sweep over the Penguins while the Blue Birds were winning all three from the Blue Jays.

D. C. GOVERNMENT

The D. C. Government League at Brookland Recreation found Joe Marcellino, Purchasing, and Bill Williams, Police No. 1, the leaders with their highs of 163 and 387, respectively.

LADIES FEDERAL

The Ladies Federal League completed its season last night at Arcadia with Agriculture taking the flag. The GPO and Marine teams finished second and third, respectively. Annette Behan, FBI, led the last meet with individual highs of 144 and 372 and, teamed with Miss Seiler, won the high-low tournament that was a part of last night's play.

PETWORTH

Johnny Ressa and Nick Benner, both of Sollers Plumbing, sparked the fast Petworth League last night with 158 and 415, respectively, but were unable to keep their team from dropping the odd game to Schaeffer Motors. The two-game loss put the leading Sollers boys just one game ahead of Bill Jawish Service Station, who captured two from Wonder Bread.

D. C. TAXI

Linden Smith, Arrow Cab, and Johnny Ressa, Premier No. 1, took the highs in the D. C. Taxi League at Brookland Recreation, the first with a high game of 154, and the latter with top set of 406 following a 150 game. Ressa's counts helped his Premier No. 1 boys to team highs of 622 and 1,730. Bell Cab, leading the league with 48-24, won all three from the Diamond Senators.

Zivic Predicts K. O. Over Kaplan Tonight

Bout Scheduled For 10 Rounds At Boston Garden

By the United Press

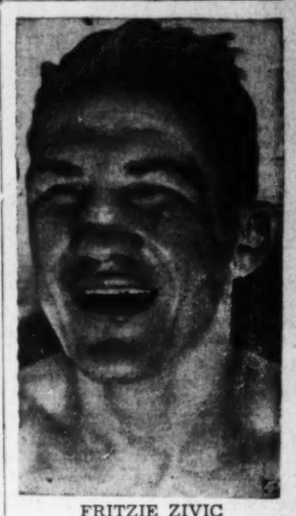

Boston, April 17.—A clouting Croatian who gained and retained the world welterweight championship by twice conquering Henry Armstrong predicted tonight he will preserve his two-year unbeaten record by knocking out fast-climbing Mike Kaplan, of Boston.

Relaxed in his back Bay Hotel suite after "killing time" by "catching an early show," smiling Fritzie Zivic said he was in fine shape for his ten-round nontitle bout with the smooth-working Kaplan at Boston Garden tomorrow night.

Zivic, returning here for the first time since his amateur battles of a decade ago, declined to name the round in which he expected to stow away Kaplan, who, oddly enough, rose to prominence in New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland rings.

"It's hard to tell because Kaplan's a good boxer, but he can't hit very hard," Zivic said. "I got a decision over him in Philadelphia 17 months ago. That stuff is the bunk about him nearly beating me. This time I'll stop him cold."

Promoter Rip Valenti's dour outlook has brightened with the brisk advance ticket sale. He thinks 15,000 fans will pay about $22,000 at $3.30 tops to see Boston's first major bout since December when Joe Louis shuffled into town on his palooka parade to belt out Al McCoy.

Rube McNab Stars as W.-L. Beats Gonzaga

Serving up a baffling change of pace, lanky Rube McNab limited Ganzaga High to 6 scattered blows and led Washington-Lee to a 9-1 victory yesterday on the Arlington diamond.

The Purple, surprise victor over Roosevelt Wednesday, couldn't get a man to third until the last inning when its only run was scored. W.-L., meanwhile, had pushed over twin tallies in the first, second and third and filled in with single runs in the third, fourth and eighth.

The ninth inning was a perfect indication of the support McNab received from his mates. With the bases still loaded after Gonzaga's only counter had been marked up on a hit batsman, a double, a single and Third Baseman McPherson's error, the Little Generals throttled all further threats with a perfect double play.

The home team registered 13 safeties off the offerings of Billy Carroll, five of them doubles and another, McNab's slashing triple in the second inning with a mate on base. In addition to his mound work, McNab led the winners' batting with three hits in four times.

Elmer Raba, All-Metropolitan football star, paced Gonzaga's platework with a double and triple in four official trips.

Dahlgren and Wes Ferrell Star as Bees Defeat Phils, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 17.—Babe Dahlgren and Pitcher Wes Ferrell clubbed the Phils into submission today with a home run apiece as the Boston Bees came from behind to trounce the National Leaguers, 7-5.

Dahlgren's circuit clout in the eighth, scoring Max West ahead of him, came as the Phils were enjoying a 5-4 lead. In the closing stanza, Ferrell parked a four-bagger into the upper left field stands to clinch the victory.

Max West earlier had homered.

The Phils pulled up from a 4-0 position with a sparkling rally in the fourth inning, counting two runs, and added the remainder in the sixth.

Pete, Jr., Shows Heels to Derby Candidates at Havre de Grace

Clarksville Runs Second, Choice Is 3d

Karnak Wins Third Race and Pays Price Of $292.10 for $2; 9,000 See Program

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Havre de Grace, Md., April 17.—Kentucky Derby candidates mean nothing in the young life of a thoroughbred named Pete Jr., owned by Mrs. M. R. Waugh, of Culpeper, Va. This 3-year-old won while opening daylight on his closest rival while three candidates for theLouisville classic were out of the money and so far back that they didn't know which horse won. Second money in the test of 6 furlongs, named the Sykesville Purse, was taken by J. Greener's Clarksville, while Handy Tom, owned by the estate of A. B. Letellier, was third.

It was a blow to the Derby hopes of the Tower Stable's Fettacairn, who was fourth; Mrs. J. L. Furr's Don Orlan, who was fifth, and R. Sterling Clark's Air Marshal, who was seventh. Only eight 3-year-olds competed.

Pete Jr., knocked about in his previous race, made good for his Virginia backers with a $16.40 price tag attached. He stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5 under strong handling by Jockey Ira Hanford.

Longest Price Paid

Handy Tom, the favorite of the group, was rushed off his hoofs as Jockey Johnny Gilbert pushed him in an effort to outrun Grant Thorn's White Time. Gilbert accomplished this but the effort robbed his mount of late speed and he was a staggering third.

From a monetary standpoint, the day's big feature was the third race in which a limited few customers in the crowd of 9,000 cashed the longest mutuel of the Maryland season to date. The winner was Karnak, a maiden when he marched postward in the colors of A. S. Hewitt. After Jockey Bobby Watson had driven him to the wire, the board showed $292.10 to win, $81.50 to place and $34.30 to show.

Of a total of $18,341 played to win on the race only $113 was played on Karnak. There was $84 played on him to place and $105 to show. The highest price this year before today was the $248.30 hung up by Oak Tar at Bowie's recent meeting.

Carriage Trade is Second

Trainer E. A. Christmas, who conditions Karnak, was not present to see the Ksar colt perform. Christmas is reported suffering from pneumonia. Karnak won by half a length from Carriage Trade with Rough News, owned by Mrs. J. Y. Christmas, sister-in-law of the winning trainer, third, in the limit group of 12.

Favorites, for the most part, had a rough day. The program opened with a form reversal by Burner, owned by Mrs. J. B. Bond. Beaten by practically the same horses at Bowie, Burner came home under Jockey Sammy Palumbo's riding today, winning from Annikin and Braving Danger. Burner paid $19.40.

The race brought a spectacular spill in front of the grandstand soon after the field got under way. Jockey Rocco Sisto, the Washington boy, was thrown among the pounding hoofs when his mount, Brookie Boy ran up on the heels of Extra Good and stumbled to his knees. The customers gasped as Sisto bounced along in the dust. But the boy got up, brushed off his pants and was back in the saddle for the second race.

Those who coupled Burner with Son Islam, $8.40 winner of the second race, collected a $59.40 daily double. Post Haste, one of several well-played 2-year-olds in this field, delayed the start by losing Jockey Johnny Gilbert and running off for three quarters of a mile.

Conklin Picks 'Em

New York, April 17 (INS).—Sweet Wine, paying $76.80, and Equivocal, paying $21.80, were among the four winners picked at Keeneland Thursday in the International News Service racing selections by Les Conklin.

BURNER, steadied on the outside of the leaders from the start, took command approaching the stretch, drew clear, but had to be shaken up near the end to hold ANNIKIN safe. The latter was allowed to race on her own courage early, responded when placed to a drive, lugged in at the sixteenth pole and closed willingly. BRAVING DANGER closed with a bold rush. BLACK BOO could not keep up early and was blocked by ANNIKIN while coming strongly along the rail in the final eighth. ACTRESS was used up racing with RED JACK and weakened badly. RED JACK saved ground while setting the pace and tired. BROOKIE BOY ran upon the heels of EXTRA GOOD in the opening furlong and lost his rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SON ISLAM, $8.40, $4.10, $2.80; ELDER (entry), $5.30, $3.40; HIGH CELERITY, $3.50.

SON ISLAM, rated while racing in the first flight, responded when placed to a drive and won going away. ELDER raced lapped on HIGH CELERITY from the start and held on gamely in the closing test. HIGH CELERITY was first away, could not shake off ELDER and appeared to be lugging in through the stretch drive and was taken up. COOCH'S BRIDGE closed with a bold rush. BRIGHT FINISH was off slowly and was not a serious factor. The others were not prominent.

Daily Double—BURNER and SON ISLAM Paid $59.40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KARNAK, $292.10, $81.50, $34.30; CARRIAGE TRADE, $8.10, $5.90; ROUGH NEWS, $3.50.

KARNAK, off slowly, but hustled between horses to gain a contending position at the far turn, came out for racing room and withstood a long drive to hold CARRIAGE TRADE safe at the end. CARRIAGE TRADE was in the thick of forward contention from the beginning, rallied to take command in midstretch, but could not resist the winner while under strong handling. ROUGH NEWS was squeezed back leaving the backstretch and came willingly when clear. PETE JR. PRINCE, last away, was shut off repeatedly and closed with good energy. PATRON SAINT closed with a bold rush. TANTRUM was well placed to the stretch and tired. ELMADA set the early pace under hustling tactics and weakened when displaced. FLOOD II got to the front and stopped badly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OASIS, $12.00, $5.00, $4.10; FOGOSO (entry), $2.80, $2.40; REAL VALUE, $4.90.

OASIS took the lead in the opening furlong, withstood repeated challenges of REAL VALUE and, under pressure, lasted to stave off FOGOSO. The latter was always well placed, came out for the final drive and was wearing down the winner at the end. REAL VALUE was hard ridden while raving with OASIS and weakened in the stretch drive. PHILOSOPHER tossed his rider before the break, closed gamely and pulled up lame. TONYPANDY was not a threat. REHEARSAL was well placed early and weakened. MISS BRIDEAUX went forwardly for the quarter and stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:15½. Off at 4:15½. Winner, Mrs. M. R. Waugh's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETE JR., $16.40, $6.30, $3.80; CLARKSVILLE, $5.40, $3.30; HANDY TOM, $2.80.

PETE JR., steadied while within striking distance, responded when placed to a drive entering the stretch and wore down CLARKSVILLE to win going away. CLARKSVILLE was in the thick of the flight from the break, disposed of HANDY TOM, but could not reach the winner while ridden out. HANDY TOM was used up racing with WHITE TIME in the early stages and weakened suddenly in the stretch run. FETTACAIRN broke alertly, dropped back and went evenly thereafter. WHITE TIME had keen early speed to set and force the pace and tired badly.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from gate. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:45½. Off at 4:47⅘. Winner, R. J. Randolph's gr. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRIORITY, $7.40, $4.90, $3.50; DINGMANS, $9.40, $7.70; GOLDEN MOWLEE, $16.10.

PRIORITY was in the thick of contention from the start, assumed command on the backstretch, drew out and won with some speed in reserve. DINGMANS moved up menacingly approaching the stretch, but was unable to gain on the winner in the closing stages. GOLDEN MOWLEE was within striking distance from the break, was hard ridden and was tiring through the stretch. STOP LOSS was rushed while setting the pace and tired gradually after being displaced. PETESAMO closed with good energy. EXIT MARCH was prominent for a half and quit. RINGSTAR was through early.

SUN VICTOR was hustled while setting the early pace and weakened badly. The others were outrun.

IDA ROGERS, allowed to settle into her stride, improved her position steadily on the outside, disposed of NOSY in midstretch and drew out in the final eighth. NOSY came over on horses leaving the gate, was hustled to the top, set a good pace and was taken up when displaced. Berg's claim of foul against the winner was not allowed. DON PECOS lacked early speed and was a distant third. TRANSMITTER was bothered early, was taken up on the backstretch, came out and weakened under a drive at the end. SIROCCO was prominent along the backstretch and weakened. DARK MAY and PLAYGOLD weakened. WALTER LIGHT was blocked leaving the gate.

Selections at Havre De Grace

Dear Al.

The colt Walter Haight may not be the fastest thing in the world but he seems to have a lock and key on that No. 1 post position. He makes his second start today and for the second time he breaks o.f the rail. I'll have to bet my usual 2 on him but I can't recommend him to the Benningites. He is still green as grass and I can't see him as a wagering proposition. However, I will say that it is easier to explain a loser than to explain a winner, so I hope he don't fool me. In his first race Walter Haight ran against five fillies. He finished next to last. The press box wisecracker said that the one he beat was his wife, "that Haight is always one step ahead of her." Art Brown is jealous of the fact Alan Clarke named his colt Walter Haight. Now the WOL windbag is trying to get John Manfuso to name one for him. The tote and three neon signs have been about the only improvements around this track in the last ten years. The "house" rabbit, the one that shows up here every spring, was in the infield doing his or her stuff yesterday. The tulips are up. Last year they didn't show until the meeting ended. The eight stakes which closed at Pimlico last Tuesday all filled exceedingly well, according to Racing Secretary Charles McLennan. The late closing date gives greater assurance that those named will be considered as likely starters and if this holds true then the Pimlico spring meeting opening on April 28 is in for a well-rounded field in each day's stake attraction. Trainer Tom Waller is at Pimlico where he has Mrs. C. B. Daniels' Pass Out, a candidate for the $20,000 Dixie Handicap, on Wednesday, May 7. Pass Out is an extremely fast horse as evidenced when he set the stiff early pace in last year's Massachusetts Handicap only to be beaten for the winner's share by Eight Thirty. Pass Out has been assigned a burden of 114 pounds for the Dixie. The Jervis Spencer Steeplechase Handicap, principal brush stake event of the Pimlico spring meeting, to be decided on Friday, May 2, attracted 24 entries to the great delight of Eddie Brennan, steeplechase impresario of the old Maryland Jockey Club course. The race promises to be a grand contest since the even two dozen candidates include such famous thoroughbreds as Annibal, Ossabaw, Dolly's Love, Good Chance and Deanslaw. The first two mentioned will be particularly recalled for the wonderful match contest they staged for war relief at Belmont Park last spring.

BILL.

First race—CREDENCE showed a good effort in his first start of the year and should improve enough to win this heat at long odds. DARK FRIEND seems to have a bit of class on these and should be no worse than second. IDLE NIGHT has been pulling up sore in past races, but could take it all on best races.

Second race—RING UP scored in impressive fashion in that heat at Bowie and should not have much trouble with a field of this caliber. HI-LIGHT is strictly a speed horse and may hang on long enough to earn a share of the purse. BALLAROSA was highly regarded as a 2-year-old and will be dangerous.

Third race—FLAMING GLORY, the property of Mrs. A. Pelleteri, has been going great guns in morning trials and should account for top money in this affair for youngsters. Stable is doing good and I will hop on. CHAFFER showed a fair race at Bowie and should improve. PETE'S BET has had trouble in two starts, and would be dangerous with good racing luck.

Fourth race—GREENY suffered bad racking luck in that last and still got up in time to score a victory. Is heavily weighted, but still appears a good bet. POMIVA has a high turn of early speed and should take a portion of the split. PIMLICO LADY was better than that race at Bowie would indicate.

Fifth race—EQUISTAR raced in the Harford Handicap in his last start and showed good early speed. Should open a long lead with these and hold on for the top award. SLOW MOTION has trained well and could be dangerous on best form. BOGERT is not outclassed and should show a good effort.

Sixth race—BOSTON PAL is only a shell of his old self, but still appears capable of handling this field. and is assured of smart handling. Will be handled by Al Shelhamer DNIEPER is another with a bit of class, and will like the distance. KNOXVILLE is next in line.

Seventh race—TRYSAK was an easy winner in that last at Bowie and changed hands in the race. Has high weight of the field, but appears well placed. MIGHTILY showed good form in the South and may upset the top one. CREEPY MOUSE closed good in a sprint, and could be a factor on best form.

Eighth race—SEALOCH was poorly handled in her last, and appears the best bet of the day in a race of this kind. This is cheaper than she has been running, and the price will be a good one. SCHLEY GOREE always gives a good account of himself, and must be reckoned with. KAPTIME is way down in company and would be dangerous if it came up mud.

Best bet—SEALOCH.

Peacock's 69, Wenzel's Ace Feature Golf Tourney at Manor

E. Johnson Posts Gross Score of 74

Country Club Pin League Members in Annual Golf Play; Houghton Has 70

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

William H. Wenzel knocked in his first hole-in-one, and Roger Peacock, a guest, played 11 holes in 5 under par to cofeature the biggest golf turnout in the history of the Country Club Bowling League Tournament yesterday at Manor Country Club.

Wenzel, a Congressional member, dropped a 9-iron shot 5 feet from the pin on the shortened eleventh hole and it rolled in for an ace while playing with Lou Harrison, W. A. Covert and Bob May. His round was 82.

Peacock, who has played Manor in 64 and 65 in former years, wielded a red-hot niblick for 11 holes yesterday and stood on the twelfth tee with par in for a 65 but he came to grief in sand traps on three of the next four holes and only a birdie on the thirteenth kept him under the par 70 mark with a 69.

Has Three Straight Birdies

The former State, city and Mid-Atlantic champion started with three consecutive birdies and added another on the ninth as he played the woods nine in 31 shots, 4 under par. His birdie putts were all short, and he added another with a deuce on the eleventh. The Indian Spring shotmaker missed three birdie putts under 6 feet on the front nine. Starting with the twelfth hole, however, Roger ran into three sixes, all from trap trouble, to ruin his chances of a new record.

Low gross among the golfer bowlers went to Everett Johnson, a former Manor Invitation champ, who posted 35, 39—74, one shot better than the 75s of Lou Harrison and Chick Heimer. The latter played 13 holes in one under par, but was over par on each of the five finishing holes to wind up with a 75. Beaver Dam Pro Al Houghton, also a guest, played with Heimer and returned a level par 70, without sinking a single putt over 2 feet.

A four-way tie for first prize in the Blind Bogey included Don Boyer, Beaver Dam, 89—16—73; Leslie Shade, Kenwood, 89—16—73; Earl Clary, Indian Spring, 80—7—73, and Tom Dennis, a member of Manor's championship bowling team for the fifth year, 91—18—73.

Ties Prevail

Ties also existed in the second and third lucky numbers in the Bogey play with the following winners: Tom Powers, Kenwood, 90—20—70; L. S. Beale, Argyle, 85—15—70; Robert Fuchs, Kenwood, 83—13—70; W. A. Covert, Manor, 85—15—70, and G. Rittenhouse, 81—11—70; W. Wenzel, Congressional, 82—8—74; Ed Schlegel, Manor, 104—30—74; Dr. George Greeves, Beaver Dam, 101—27—74, and Marvin Johnston, Earl McPhilomy and W. Wire, all at 72.

Gross prizes were awarded low-scoring members of the competing clubs who were not in the other prize lists. They were Fred Murray, Argyle, 77; Dr. H. L. Smith, Congressional, 79; N. E. Rogers, Beaver Dam, 83; Roger Bounds, Kenwood, 83; Karl Giles, Indian Spring, 91; Dan Pratt, Manor, 81, and F. J. Hanrahan, Bannockburn, 96.

A field of more than 100 competed and stayed for dinner, presentation of bowling and golf prizes and entertainment.

Patty Berg Title Winner At Asheville

By the Associated Press

Asheville, N. C., April 17.—Patty Berg, the former National champion, won the Land of the Sky Invitational Golf Tournament today with a 72-hole total of 305, five over par for the Biltmore Forest Country Club course. Her score for today's final 18 holes was 79, four above par.

Eleven strokes behind the Minneapolis red head, the defending champion, Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., finished second with a total of 316. Her score for today was the same as Patty's. Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., runnerup last year, needed 82 strokes today and finished with 325 for third place.

Other cards, with today's scores and 72-hole totals, included: Mrs. E. T. Nolan, Newcastle, Pa., 88—348; Mrs. Ben Parks, Charlotte, 93—364; Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, Scarsdale, N. Y., 91—365; Mrs. M. Hockenheimer, Elmsford, N. Y., 97—381, and Mrs. N. E. Wessells, Roanoke, Va., 107—420.

Chase to Hurl Against Yankees

started hitting the ball. Doc Cramer, Ben Chapman and George Case gave us better outfielding than we've had in years. George Archie has been playing a swell first base and has been starting to hit. Buddy Lewis is playing third and hitting better than I thought he knew how. And Cecil Travis has been playing great ball."

But plainly disturbing Harris is the draft status of Buddy Lewis, who may not be with the club after May 10. There is still a slender hope that the North Carolina draft board will reinvestigate Lewis' plea that his parents depend on his income for support, and Harris is clinging to that possibility. Lewis was the outstanding performer for the Nats at Boston.

Jimmy Bloodworth is available now for infield duty, completely recovered from the beaning at Baltimore last week, but Harris may not rush him into the line-up, particularly against right-handed pitching. Buddy Myer has been hitting the ball hard despite a paucity of safe hits and his fielding has been on the sensational side, particularly when he was mixed up in a double-play.

Bloodworth, no longer complaining of dizzy spells, went to the bat as a pinch hitter in Boston and displayed no shyness at the plate. At the first sign of a need for more power, he'll be in the line-up at some point.

There is no certainty that Rick Ferrell will be behind the bat tomorrow against the Yankees. The veteran catcher turned his ankle while running out a hit yesterday and was still limping as the Nats boarded their train tonight. Al Evans is apt to be catching Chase today.

Giants Sweep Series With Dodgers

By International News Service

New York, April 17.—The New York Giants swept the three-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers by taking the final game today, 7 to 5.

Harry Danning's double in the seventh drove in the winning run off Curt Davis, Bump Hadley, Yankee discard, making his National League debut, failed to go the route, but was credited with the victory.

Highlight of the game was the relief pitching of Cliff Melton, who came on in the seventh with men on first and third, and none out and kept the Dodgers from scoring.

Reds Lose Third in Row To Cards, 7-6

By International News Service

Cincinnati, April 17.—The World Champion Reds dropped their third straight game to the Cardinals today, 7-6.

With two out in the ninth Southpaw Bob Logan, of the Reds, made a wild pitch, letting in one run, then issued a pass and was socked for a triple by Crespi for the winning run.

Harry Craft drove in five runs for the Reds with a homer and double and he also hit a single and another double. The Reds filled the bases with one out in the ninth, but Max Lanier replaced Hershell Lyons and prevented a score.

Each team used 18 players, the Cards using six pitchers and the Reds four.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Warm, sunny days at this time of the year bring thoughts of the outdoors and a yearning to get a rod in the hand again, and, if the tackle is light enough there is plenty of fishing right here in the confines of the District—for the white perch that come up the Potomac to spawn at the headwaters—Little Falls.

Big white perch weigh half-pound or a little more. At the height of the run the giants of the species provide real fun, for they often go better than three-quarters of a pound.

Right now, any angler can catch several hundred in an hour or two, but most of them are still on the small side. Bloodworms are the bait, but if the garden variety is available, they'll do almost as well. Small sprout hooks, and, for the most fun, light tackle.

Herring are flipping here and there, but the time isn't quite ripe for snagging, even though many dip nets have been working on the Virginia shore.

The water level is down to about normal, but the flow is still fast. Neither is it what could be called clear, although with no rain above, this weekend should find it in excellent shape.

This week has brought many questions about fishing in the Tidal Basin and off the seawall, from anglers new in Washington.

We have never advocated fishing in either, because of the pollution coming from the Anacostia and from Alexandria with every flooding tide. There is no doubt that thorough cooking precludes any chance of any infection, but we still do not like the idea of fishing in that kind of water when it is possible to go a few miles above, or a dozen below, and get away from it; at least until the program for correcting this condition is more advanced.

And, the bass season doesn't open in the Basin until Decoration Day. A season that has made this fishing attractive to many because it is several weeks earlier than in any surrounding waters. Then there is that little item of a permit—obtained from the Interior Department without cost.

Maryland trout waters are in prime condition, and the fish are rising in fine shape to dry flies. We believe any stream will be productive, regardless of the fact that many complaints, about one thing or another, have come to us this week.

From some, it is the crowded conditions of the easily reached streams, which will be corrected within a few weeks, as soon as the bay season breaks.

From others, the lack of courtesy shown by many anglers. On that there is no excuse to bring forward. Anglers who show poor breeding on a stream probably do so at home.

And, the streams have been stocked—each and every one worthy of the name of a trout stream, and many others also, in the hope they will supply a small amount of sport. But remember early season fishing is tough, and that most of the fish being stocked are rainbows and browns. Both of them moody, and not inclined to take a fly or a lure unless they really want it. And there isn't any dearth of food in any Maryland stream.

HOW'S YOUR SARTORIAL I.Q.

FIT YOUR STYLE?

If you've chosen your suit correctly for your own personality, here are a few sure shot suggestions for choosing effective ties. Grey flannels are improved by bright foulards. Glen Plaids, too, call for a similar treatment.

For tan suits, get foulards with green and tan or lots of red and gold in them. Try to avoid repetition of pattern themes, as check or plaid ties with plaid suits or sport jackets. And avoid striped ties that repeat the suit pattern.

Wear bolder Charvet patterns with plainer fabrics and the new Shetland sport jackets. Let yourself go with larger patterns with quite some color on white or cream background . . . or with multi-color paisleys.

Jabo Kenner Added to Fight Card Monday Night at Arena

Jabo Kenner, District colored heavyweight sensation, will meet Buck Jones, Baltimore fighter, in a special eight-rounder on Monday night's show at Turner's Arena. Efforts to get Jimmy DeChard to meet Kenner at a $500 guarantee failed, and thus Matchmaker Menendez secured the Baltimorean.

Cocoa Kid, New Haven colored welterweight flash, and Joey Sutka, of Detroit, the Midwestern middleweight champion, will clash in the eight-round semiwindup. Cocoa and Sutka are to arrive this morning and will drill at Huron gym this afternoon.

Georgie Sacks, who trained Cocoa for his 43 straight wins last year, will be in charge of the New Haven welterweight, while Harry Raskin will drive in from Detroit with Sutka, the hard-hitting lad who has won some 50 fights in his five-year career.

Harvey Massey, conqueror about six months ago of Ernie Vigh, will reach town today to complete training for his eight-round sewiwindup with El Brookman, of Washington.

In a four-rounder closed out yesterday Jackie Cranford, Golden Gloves star, will engage Flash Lightning, of Richmond.

Federal Bonds Jump on 'Low' Tax Program

By the Associated Press

New York, April 17.—United States Government bonds rose sharply today after publication of Secretary Morgenthau's statement at Washington disclosing the Treasury tax program for the next year.

The $3,500,000,000 which the secretary said had been agreed upon as the amount to be raised in new taxes was widely hailed in Wall Street investment quarters as a yardstick that would measure the Government's activities in the new financing market in coming months.

Most quarters agreed the amount was much less than had been expected and the eagerness which buyers displayed in entering bids for wanted maturities indicated that feeling was fairly general. Over the counter dealers, who handle the great bulk of Government bond business, said much of the buying came from out-of-town banks and other investors.

Throughout recent weeks despite adverse war news, labor troubles and other news which has persistently depressed stocks and in some cases corporate bonds, Government obligations have given not an inch of ground and, on many days, sailed on into higher levels.

The new Treasury 2½ per cent taxable bonds, for example, issued about a month ago at 100, have advanced steadily and closed today over the counter at 103 11/32 bid and 103 13/32 asked, a new peak price. Gains for other issues ranged from about 4/32 to 22/32 with longer maturities making the best showing. A similar performance was shown in trading on the stock exchange.

Corporate bonds were mostly higher. A group of rails rose fractions to more than 2 points. These included New Haven 4½s at 26, Southern Pacific 4½s at 48¾, Missouri - Kansas - Texas 5s at 28¾, Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '60 at 26¼ and St. Paul 5s at 8½.

Good demand lifted German 5½s and 7s a little more than a point each. Other foreign issues were about steady.

Total sales of $6,826,525, par value compared with $5,751,550 on Wednesday.

Steel Output Rate of 100% Is Maintained for Full Month

Monthly Output Rate Since 1932

For the second time in its history, and the first time since 1929, the steel industry maintained a monthly average production of 100 per cent of capacity. March rate of operations was exactly 100 per cent. In May, 1929, the rate averaged 101.7 per cent but, based on present capacity, it would have averaged only 84 per cent.

Tonnage output in March exceeded that of May, 1929, by 19 per cent, totaling 7,146,372 net tons of open-hearth, Bessemer, and electric furnace steel, 14 per cent above the February production of 6,250,413 tons, and 42 per cent higher than the 4,390,090 tons produced in March, 1940.

Since the beginning of April operations have declined very gradually, sliding from 100 to 98.5 per cent in the first half of the month. The decline is almost entirely due to a shortage of beehive coke, supplementary source of fuel for pig iron production used in periods of high activity, when by-product coke supplies are inadequate. It is likely, according to the Iron Age, that the steelmaking rate may be affected to even a more pronounced degree the next week or two even though coal mining should be resumed shortly.

Operations for the first quarter of the year averaged 98 per cent, as compared with 72 per cent in the corresponding period of 1940 and 55 per cent in the similar period of 1939.

Carriers Report Drop in Loadings On Coal Stoppage

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 679,808 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 3,594 cars, or 0.5 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 60,703 cars, or 9.8 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 132,629 cars, or 24.2 per cent, compared with 1939.

The association attributed the decrease in loadings to the stoppage of soft coal mining, which was offset by a big seasonal expansion in ore shipments. Decreases in other classifications, however, brought a contra-seasonal drop in total loadings.

Gotham Bank Clearings Show Sharp Decline

New York, April 17 (AP).—A sharp reducation in New York turnover accounted in part for a decline in this week's total bank clearings for 23 leading cities below the previous week and the corresponding period last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Aggregate transactions for all cities for the week ended April 16 was $5,682,673,000 against $5,701,232,000 in the same 1940 week. They were $12,478,000 under the previous week.

New York clearances were $2,981,145,000 against $3,358,295,000 last year. Total of outside cities, $2,701,528,000, was 15.3 per cent ahead of last year's $2,342,937,000.

Wholesale Commodity Index Continues Rise

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday an increase of .9 per cent in wholesale commodity prices for the week ended April 12, due largely to advances in livestock, fats and oils.

The commodity index now stands at 82.9 per cent of the 1926 average as compared with 78 per cent a year ago.

Brokers' Loans Drop $7,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $337,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $7,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $479,000,000.

National Dairy Names Van Bomel As New President

New York, April 17 (AP).—L. A. Van Bomel, for the last four years executive vice president of National Dairy Products Corporation, today was elected president, succeeding Thomas H. McInnerney, who was named chairman of the board, a newly created position.

The new president, a native New Yorker, has been associated with the dairy business since his early youth and acquired much of his experience "down on the farm." He was connected for 37 years with Sheffield Farms Co., National Dairy's New York subsidiary.

McInnerney founded National Dairy Products and had been its only president. As he relinquished that position at the annual stockholders meeting today, McInnerney said "more employment and expanding pay rolls due to our defense program will certainly be reflected in larger domestic demand for dairy products."

He reported an 8 per cent gain in first quarter sales.

Auto Production Picks Up Speed As Ford Resumes

Detroit, April 17 (AP).—Automotive News in its routine survey of automobile plant activity said today that this week's production would total 103,380 cars and trucks. Last week's output totaled 100,095. A year ago this week 102,115 new cars and trucks were turned out.

The trade paper's survey credits General Motors' divisions with 54,630 unit this week compared with 54,565 last week; Chrysler with 28,235, against 26,162 last week and Ford, expected to get two days curtailed production this week, with 2,675 units. The Ford total, it says, is expected to rise sharply next week as Ford's 16 branch assembly plants resume.

All other companies, Automotive News said, were on five days' schedules this week.

Retail Volume Reported 40% Better in Week

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended April 12 were 40 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year, but the difference was due mostly to the changing date of Easter.

The week represented the last week of Easter shopping this year, but last year Easter occurred on March 24 and the comparable week last year contained none of the trade stimulation of the Easter season.

For similar reasons, sales in the week ended April 5 were 19 per cent above the similar week last year, and sales for the four weeks ended April 12 averaged 24 per cent more than in the corresponding period last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases for the week ended April 12 were:

Boston, 45; New York, 33; Philadelphia, 59; Cleveland, 52; Richmond, 76; Atlanta, 49; Chicago, 30; St. Louis, 42; Kansas City, 35; Dallas, 40, and San Francisco, 40 per cent.

Business Briefs

President Arthur C. Smith reported yesterday that directors of Smith's Transfer & Storage Co., Washington, have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $13 a share.

H. Henry Winter, manager of the commodity trading department of Robert C. Jones & Co., is optimistic on the outlook for cotton. He pointed out that March proved a record-breaking month for consumption and was 15,000 bales over the most optimistic estimate.

William H. Smith, of Riggs National Bank, won third place in the American Institute of Banking's public speaking contest in Philadelphia this week.

Retiring at 79, J. L. Sherwood, of the Hamilton National Bank, was honored by his colleagues at a dinner Wednesday night in the Continental Hotel. Mr. Sherwood, manager of the Brookland Branch, is the first employe to retire under the Hamilton's new pension plan. Mr. Sherwood is president of the Northeast Building Association.

Steel Wages

Inside story of the broadside announcement of 10-cent-an-hour pay rises for U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel Workers is that when negotiations started, the workers at U. S. Steel asked 10 cents an hour wage increases while the Steel Corporation said it could pay no more than an extra 2½ cents without a boost in steel prices.

Negotiations moved along until labor and management were only 2½ cents apart, with the corporation willing to pay 5 cents an hour more, and labor holding out for 7½ cents.

Then came the bombshell.

Steelmaker Ernest T. Weir, president of National Steel Corporation, suddenly announced he was increasing the pay of his workers 10 cents an hour. Next morning, when wage negotiations at "Big Steel" resumed, labor was back at its original demand of 10 cents an hour.

If Mr. Weir's company could pay 10 cents, why couldn't U. S. Steel, they asked?

Coming Event

Within the next few days the U. S. Treasury will open a broad publicity campaign asking you to buy its new defense bonds, which go on sale May 1, as an aid to national defense.

Heavy subscriptions are anticipated.

The new bonds and savings stamps are designed to serve investors with 10 cents to $50,000 a year of spare money seeking employment.

"The company has suffered somewhat from a shortage of materials and while it will take some time for this situation to be completely remedied, our production schedule is moving well. Our employment program, halted because of serious shortages of fabricated materials, has been started again.

"The company is making regular deliveries of B-26 bombers to hte Army and we shortly will fly the first ship of the 187 ("Baltimore") type, a medium bomber designed expressly for the British. Thereafter we will begin quantity production on the type. Having completed a normal order of PBM-type patrol bombers for the Navy, the company is far advanced in tooling for the large defense orders for this general type."

Steel Stocks Slump on Price 'Freezing;' Rails Buoyant in Weak General List

New York, April 17.—Weakness of steels put brakes on the stock market today despite a mild rally of rails and scattered industrials. The list dipped fractions to more than a point at the start in slow dealings, revived around mid-day and slipped again in the final hour. dealings, revived around midday and slipped again in the final hour. Closing trends were irregular.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point, at 40, putting this barometer only .2 of a point above the year's low. It was a narrow market, at the best, with 639 individual issues traded, or about half the number on the exchange. Of these 233 were up, 205 down and 201 unchanged.

Dealings were negligent throughout, transfers for the full proceedings totaling 401,490 shares against 437,460 yesterday.

On the pessimistic side, brokers said, was the somewhat gloomier war outlook, the action of the Government in pegging steel prices in the wake of a wide wage boost in this industry and preparations inaugurated by Washington to raise an additional $3,500,000,000 through new taxes.

The fact offerings were exceptionally light was thought to have inspired a little bidding here and there.

Brightening outlook for carrier earnings aided the rails notwithstanding last week's freight loadings, out today, disclosed a contra-seasonal drop owing mainly to shutdowns in the soft-coal field. A rebound in traffic was forecast as Northern miners reached an agreement with the union and many mines were expected to reopen shortly.

Pullman proved a soft spot, falling 2 points on an opening trade of 10,000 shares as the company refused to accept offers of certain holders to sell their shares under the concern's tender announced March 26. The stock ended off 1⅝, at 24⅞.

Among prominent losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler (which hit a new 1941 bottom), Eastman Kodak, American Can, Standard Oil of N. J. and Allied Chemical.

Finishing moderately ahead were Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, American Smelting, Anaconda, Sears Roebuck, Pere Marquette preferred, Goodrich, American Telephone and Western Union.

Rail bonds did fairly well, along with United States Governments. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel and corn down ⅜ to ⅞. Cotton was 10 cents a bale lower to 5 cents higher.

Gainers in a shifty Curb included Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Illinois Zinc, Brewster Aero and Phoenix Securities. On the offside were American Cyanamid "B," Fruehauf Trailer, Axton-Fisher and Pennsylvania Salt. Turnover here was around 63,000 shares versus 60,000 Wednesday.

"We may live without poetry, music and art; we may live without conscience and live without heart; we may live without friends; we may live without books—but civilized man cannot live without cooks."

The reason for said quotation from Owen Meredith's "Lucille" is that we've been asked to call your attention, if you don't already know about it and are interested in good cooking, to a program which can be heard twice a week over WJSV and which is devoted to nothing else and Mr. Meredith seems to size up the usefulness of such a program pretty well.

The program is Mary Lee Taylor's and it's heard every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m. and it's a pleasant, effortless way whereby the housewife can get suggestions for tempting, out-of-the-ordinary meals as well as learn new methods for improving the old dinner table standbys.

Mary Lee Taylor has been dispensing expert culinary advice over C. B. S. from her famed "experimental kitchen" in St. Louis ever since 1933 and if all the novel recipes she has given out were laid end to end you could work up hundreds of good appetites just by walking past them. Not only does Miss Taylor give the recipes, but tells all sorts of ways that money can be saved in preparing meals.

Weather Conditions

Local showers and thunderstorms have occurred within the last 24 hours at most stations from Louisiana and eastern Texas northeastward to the Lake region, the upper Ohio Valley, and thence eastward to the New England coast in the deep mass of warm moist air that has continued to move northward and northeastward from the western Gulf of Mexico. High pressure continues from the Southeastern States eastward over the ocean, with highest pressure 1020.0 millibars (30.12 inches) about 600 miles east of West Palm Beach, Fla., and pressure is low and falling over the Plains States, the lower Mississippi and upper Mississippi Valleys and the southern Rocky Mountain region. Caribou, Me., 1005.4 millibars (29.69 inches), and it is being closely followed by a small anticyclone. Erie, Pa., 1015.9 millibars (30.00 inches). Temperatures are now much below normal to the west and north of the disturbances centered over Colorado, due to the southward movement of cold air of polar origin. U. S. Financing For Canada King's Object

American financial aid for Canada emerged yesterday as a prime object of the "vacation" visit here of Canadian Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Deputy Finance Minister Clark of Canada, it was learned, arrived in Washington yesterday to assist King in dealings with the American Government, as officials disclosed that Canada's supply of dollar exchange is running low.

King staged a round of significant conferences yesterday.

He conferred with Secretary of State Hull and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and was also on the calling list of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador.

The subject of his conferences was not officially disclosed.

The presence here of Clark, crack economist of the finance ministry in Ottawa, was taken as evidence, however, that Canada is seeking American financial aid, either in the form of a loan or a currency stabilization agreement or an outright lend-lease grant of equipment.

Completion of plans for the military and naval defense of the Eastern and Western coasts of Canada and the United States was announced meanwhile in Montreal by the Canada-United States Joint Permanent Defense Board.

The group has been meeting regularly for months both in the United States and Canada. Its deliberations have been highly secret. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York is American chairman of the board.

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

George N. Bowen, 69, head of the lumber company bearing his name in Hyattsville, died early yesterday at his home in University Park following a short illness.

He had an active political life, serving on the Hyattsville Town Council for several terms, as a member of the Prince Georges County board of commissioners from 1930 to 1934 and as a member of the Republican State central committee for Prince Georges County from 1934 to 1938.

Mr. Bowen was a director of the Hyattsville Building and Loan Association, a former director of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. and president of the Real Estate Park Co. He had attended the Memorial Methodist Church in Hyattsville and served as a member of its board of trustees for several years.

He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Jennie E. Bowen; a son, G. Carville Bowen, of University Park; a grandson, G. Carville Bowen, jr., and a sister, Mrs. Jacob Gengnagle, of Baltimore. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Schenck Faces 10-Year Term In Tax Evasion Conviction

By the Associated Press

New York, April 17.—Joseph M. Schenck, film producer convicted today of income tax evasion, faces a possible civil action by the Government for payment of $253,692.62 in back taxes plus interest, as well as a ten-year prison sentence and fines of 20,000.

U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa said that unless Schenck voluntarily paid his back taxes, the Internal Revenue Bureau could file a civil suit for collection. Correa added that the Government could collect in addition a fraud penalty of 50 per cent.

The prosecutor said he had not decided on immediate steps in connection with a perjury indictment still outstanding against Schenck, charging him with making false statements to a Federal agent about payment of $100,000 to Willie Bioff, Western representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators (A. F. L.).

Moskowitz Convicted

Boff was charged with failure to pay taxes on the $100,000.

The perjury indictment was returned June 3, 1940, the same day that Schenck, board chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and his Eastern representative, Joseph Moskowitz, were accused of income tax law violations. Moskowitz was convicted today on one of four counts, making him liable to a five-year sentence and a $5,000 fine.

Schenck was convicted of evading payments in 1935 and 1936.

His acquittal of the 1937 evasion charge, Correa said, did not free him of a possible civil suit for taxes of that year.

Appeal Planned

Judge Grover Moscowitz set April 24 as the date for sentencing, but defense counsel announced that motion for an appeal was planned for that date.

A Russian immigrant, Schenck began his career by investing $600 in Paradise Park, New York. He then invested his park profits in pioneer moving pictures.

His first investments were with Marcus Loew, who showed films in a motor car on the park grounds. Then Schenck went to California, entered the production field, and signed such stars as Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, Buster Keaton, Norma Talmadge, whom he married in 1917, and many others.

Now 59, Schenck has widened his interests beyond the movies, is a director in several banks, backer of theatrical enterprises, a heavy investor in real estate, and an owner of oil wells.

Mazzini's Essay Given to Library

The original signed manuscript of Giuseppe Mazzini's famous essay on peace, "La Concordia," has been presented to the Library of Congress by Barnet J. Bayer, of New York, Librarian Archibald MacLeish announced yesterday.

Mazzini, unifier of pre-Fascist Italy, originally donated the manuscript to the United States to be sold for the benefit of the wounded soldiers during the Civil War. In "La Concordia," Mazzini expresses the conviction that the State can attain unity under a democratic system of government.

Judge Martin, Wife Unhurt In Collision

Former Justice George E. Martin, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Martin narrowly escaped injury yesterday when an automobile they occupied collided with another car on the Colesville Road at the intersection of Second Avenue, Silver Spring.

Justice Martin, who is 3, and Mrs. Martin occupied the back seat of their car, driven by a chauffeur. Garland Wolfe, a Silver Spring automobile dealer, driver of the other car, was said to have suffered minor injuries to his chest. He was treated by a private physician. Justice Martin was retired September 30, 1937. He lives at 1661 Crescent Place Northwest.

Meanwhile two traffic inquests were scheduled for the District Morgue today and a Police Court jury will decide the first negligent homicide case tried since last year.

At the inquests, a coroner's jury will review the recent traffic deaths of Robert Phillips, jr., colored, 6, of 1431 Corcoran Street Northwest, and Wong Shee Duck, 45-year-old Chinese, of 910 New York Avenue Northwest.

Howard H. Rutan, 49, of Chevy Chase, Md., an Internal Revenue Bureau attorney, said by police to have been driving the automobile which struck the Phillips child, will appear at the hearing. Robert was struck in front of 1631 Thirteenth Street Northwest, April 8, and died at Children's Hospital a short time later.

Wong Shee Duck died at Garfield Hospital Wednesday night a few hours after he was knocked down in the 800 block Upshur Street Northwest. Police said Samuel L. Cooper, 23, of 4309 Second Street Northwest, driver of the car, will face the jury in this case.

Trial of Winston S. Goodloe, 18, of 3819 Legation Street Northwest, who is charged with negligent homicide in the death of Frederick W. Duvall, 71, of 2444 Thirty-seventh Street Northwest, was recessed late yesterday and will be resumed this morning.

Goodloe was held for trial by a coroner's jury. His automobile struck and killed Duvall at Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenues Northwest, November 11.

It was testified yesterday that the Goodloe machine was in poor mechanical condition and was condemned by District automobile inspectors the morning after the accident.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the Accident Prevention Unit, told the jury at the time of the accident one headlight on the car was covered with a piece of white cloth.

Goodloe's trial is the first to come into court under the negligent homicide act since last year. A Court of Appeals decision last week, pending which all trials were held up, upheld the constitutionality of the statute.
